ROVER INVITES LIQUOR EXPOSE BY BROOKHART

Would Have Senator Tell Grand Jury of Wet Party at Willard.

IOWAN IS EXPECTED TO DISCLOSE FACTS

Revelations, Many Believe, Mean Scandal of First Magnitude.

CANNON JOINS FIGHT TO DRY UP DISTRICT

Bishop Declares Congress Must Pass Laws for Model City.

United States Attorney Leo A. Rover announced last night that he would be "very glad" to have Senator Brookhart (Republican), of Iowa, appear before the grand jury here early in October. He issued his statement after a visit to the Department of Justice.

If Brookhart accepts the invitation—and he has said he would—he will tell about a liquor party which he says was given in the Willard Hotel for newly elected senators by a Wall street broker named Fahey. Hence, it is believed by many, a scandal of the first magnitude is promised.

The controversy over prohibition enforcement, which Brookhart's charges helped intensify, now has brought into the arena Bishop James Cannon, jr., head of the Methodist Board of Temperance and Social Service, and the leader of the "Hoovercrats" in their victory in Virginia in the last national election.

In a statement released to the church press today, Bishop Cannon declares that the American people have every right to expect Congress to enact whatever legislation is needed to make Washington what President Hoover wants it to be—a "model" of prohibition enforcement for the entire country.

Pickett Defends Conditions.

Out in Eagle Grove, Iowa, the Rev. Deets Pickett, editorial director for Bishop Cannon's board, defended conditions in Washington. He expressed the opinion that the situation here had improved 50 per cent since Hoover took office, and said it would even be better were it not for the proximity of wet Maryland. Ninety per cent of the liquor consumed here, he said, comes from Maryland.

Senator Brookhart yesterday jockeyed United States Attorney Rover into a position where he either had to do something about the alleged senatorial liquor party or else suffer criticism for failing to do his duty.

While he was willing to appear before the grand jury, the Iowan said, he did not think he should be called on to initiate action by making a complaint. If he had any complaint to make, he added, it would be directed at Rover for failing in his duty.

Visits Department of Justice.

Rover's answer was to pack up a big brief case and journey to the Department of Justice. After a conference with officials there, he issued the following statement:

"I have read the statements of Senator Brookhart as reported in today's newspapers. The term of the present grand jury expires on Monday. It will, therefore, be impossible for that grand jury to consider any new matter.

"However, a new grand jury will convene early in October. When it does convene, I shall be very glad to have Senator Brookhart appear and testify to any facts of which he has personal knowledge."

Ten senators, or nearly a third of those elected in that year, attended the party at the Willard, it was learned yesterday. Their host was Walter J. Fahey, a New York broker, well known for his contacts with officialdom here.

Senator Brookhart says that there also were several "Wall streeters" present who had no hesitancy in doing some buttonhole lobbying among the guests.

Flasks Were Seen.

In his speech Tuesday Brookhart told of seeing flasks so located under a curtained table that it was only necessary for the guests to reach down and pick them up.

Brookhart, who is said to have been sitting next to a railroad president, declares that the best part of the story about the party is yet to come out.

Bishop Cannon's statement yesterday dealt in part with a report on the several international conferences which he attended in Europe recently. At the outset he heaps praise upon President Hoover, and declares that

Reeves Flays McLeod Bill as "Half-Baked, Hurried Substitute"

General Manager of National Automobile Chamber of Commerce Says Measure Does Not Give Public Protection; Eight Instances of Shortcomings Cited.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

Financial responsibility for motorists such as that proposed for the District of Columbia in a bill introduced by Representative C. J. McLeod, of Michigan, and sponsored by the American Automobile Association, is a "hasty, half-baked substitute for public protection," in the opinion of Alfred Reeves, general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. Seriously deficient in many vital respects, the law none the less is urged naturally by "insurance companies and by the American Automobile Association, some of whose clubs are in the insurance business," says Reeves.

When he speaks thus emphatically against the proposed measure, Reeves voices the opinion of the Nation's foremost manufacturing industry, for the membership of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce includes all American motor car manufacturers. Furthermore, in unprejudiced quarters, he is regarded as speaking in behalf of the agency which has done more than all others combined to improve the position of the individual motor car owner. Through the N. A. C. C., the industry has conducted a vast and expensive research into what is best for the motorist. Once its study has revealed a general need, unlimited time, effort and money have been devoted to seeing that it is met.

Concrete illustrations of the achievements of the chamber in this direction are the Federal aid highway program, its vigorous and intelligent participation in the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety, its brilliant leadership in the battle for the elimination of the war-excise tax on automobiles, an accomplishment for which various agencies unfairly have claimed full credit.

Now, as a result of its thorough, unselfish study of the situation with

PARTY LINES CROSS IN TARIFF DEBATE

UPWARD TREND FLAYED

(Associated Press.)

Party lines crossed in the Senate yesterday and made the issue so close over retention of the flexible principle in the pending tariff bill as to set party leaders feverishly to work in an effort to round up the "doubtfuls."

Senator Borah of Idaho, a campaigner for President Hoover last year, raged against the policy as an unwarranted delegation of congressional power and demanded that the President, now that he has entered the tariff dispute on the side of the flexible clause, "go through to the end and assume full responsibility" for other sections of the Republican measure.

The Idahoan voted against the flexible provisions when they were incorporated by the Senate into existing law in 1922. He is one of the leaders of the Republican independent group, which is expected to line up with many Democrats against the principle in the Hawley-Smoot bill, which empowers the executive to change customs duties after investigation by the Tariff Commission.

Borah drew a brief reply from Senator Reed (Republican), Pennsylvania, who said there was no question about the constitutionality or the wisdom of the flexible provisions. A surprise came when Senator Fletcher, a Florida Democrat, took the floor and said the President's statement not only appealed to him as "convincing," but that he favored the finance committee amendment to make the section substantially as it is in existing law.

"After all these months of study and labor," Senator Fletcher said, "you now have before you a bill which is seriously denounced as an 'iniquitious bill,' a 'monstrosity,' an 'abomination.'"

"This is the work of Congress," he added. "Could the President do worse if he tried?"

He was convinced, the Florida senator said, t "such injustices as the bill will carry and such changes as

CITY WATER QUIZ TO END NEXT WEEK

Officials Hint Separate Fund of Department Will Be Abolished.

METER SYSTEM STUDIED

Strong possibility that the District water fund may be abolished and all proceeds of the Water Department be turned over to the general District fund, from which the department would then draw for its operating requirements, was suggested by District officials yesterday.

Abolition of the water fund could only be accomplished with the sanction of Congress, but it is expected that the District Commissioners may request the necessary legislation immediately on completion of the survey of conditions in the Water Department now being conducted by Capt. Hugh S. Oram, Assistant Engineer Commissioner.

Capt. Oram's investigation is nearing completion, and it is expected that his report will be submitted to the Commissioners within the coming week.

That any increase in water rates, as requested by the Water Department, which led to The Post's disclosure of conditions in that department recently, will be approved by the Commissioners, appeared extremely doubtful.

At the present stage of his investigation, Capt. Oram is studying the records of the Water Department with regard to The Post's revelation of the fact that 14,000 of the department's meters, or about 20 per cent of all the District-owned meters now "in the ground" are inoperative.

Careful attention is given to all possible reasons why these meters should not be given proper service and to plans for overcoming such a condition, and also to complete the meterization of the city, which has been falling behind schedule in recent years of progressing.

One of the principal recommendations which it is expected Capt. Oram will make in his report to the Commissioners will call for a rotating program, under which all District-owned meters would be replaced after five years of service.

By such a procedure and by installing meters selected with full consid-

FLORIDA TAKES HOPE AS GALE STAYS AT SEA

Intensity of Storm Has Diminished, Weather Bureau Says.

DEFINITE LOCATION BECOMES MYSTERY

Disturbance Somewhere Off Eastern Tip of Peninsula.

CUBA FEELS ALARM AS HIGH WIND COMES

Waves Pound Sea Wall at Havana; Island Reported in Hurricane's Path.

(Associated Press.)

Florida was virtually assured last night by the Weather Bureau that the hurricane which has been hovering on its east coast would not strike before this morning at the earliest and the additional hope was held out that the storm has "diminished in intensity."

On the basis of their reports last night, bureau officials were unable to plot definitely the course of the storm, which is now centered near the Bahama Islands, but said no rapid movement in any direction is indicated within the next 24 hours.

The hope was held out, however, that information this morning may give further assurance that Florida will not feel the full strength of a tropical hurricane.

Nassau Still Cut Off.

Having administered a furious lashing to Elethera Island in the Bahamas Wednesday night and severed Nassau, the Bahaman capital, from communication with the outside world, the tropical hurricane last night hovered somewhere off the eastern tip of Florida.

While there was no Washington Weather Bureau advisory late yesterday, United States Forecaster Richard W. Gray, at Miami, fixed the center of the storm at 4 p. m. at a position "more than 100 miles east and somewhat south of Miami."

Gray said his observations did not indicate whether the storm would move westward or had started to do so at that time. He said it was probable the next 24 hours would bring winds of gale intensity to the extreme lower east Florida coast.

Storm Seems Near Cuba.

Earlier in the day Dr. Carolos Millas of the Cuban national observatory, said the storm center apparently was moving closer to Cuba. The Belen observatory concurred in this view, but Dr Gutierres Lanza of Belen said it was impossible to form a definite opinion because the storm was unusual

The national observatory at Havana said the disturbance may offer extreme danger to the Florida Keys. There was little indication late yesterday of an approaching storm. The barometer was slowly falling but the weather was clear.

Hurricane warnings remained on display from Jupiter to Miami on the Florida coast and northwest storm warnings flew from Miami to Key West. The populace, well prepared for whatever may come, had not relaxed its vigilance to cope with possible emergency.

Warnings Again Hoisted.

Storm warnings, taken down on the Cuban Coast yesterday morning, were hoisted again when observations indicated that the hurricane might trend

REEVES TRIED TO BALK ARMS PARLEY, CLAIM

Admiral Shearer's Friend, Senate Group Is Told by Correspondent.

SEVERAL OFFICERS CALLED HIS CHUMS

Derogatory Document's Description Stirs Ship Firms' Aid's Ire.

REPORT HELD MADE BY SCOTLAND YARD

L. R. Wilder Tells of Keeping Agent on Pay Roll, and Faith in Him.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

The charge that Rear Admiral J. M. Reeves frequently and openly expressed the hope that the Geneva naval armaments limitation conference would fail was made before the Senate subcommittee investigating Navy lobbyists yesterday.

Not only Reeves, but other officers of this country's technical staff at the parley were openly sympathetic and frequently in the company of William B. Shearer, big Navy propagandist in the employ at the time of three shipbuilding firms, it was testified.

The charges were made by Drew Pearson, widely known newspaper man, at present with the Baltimore Sun and other papers and considered an expert on international affairs. Pearson covered the conference.

Pearson declared that it was common knowledge that Shearer maintained luxurious apartments during the conference and that he entertained lavishly. He said he was surprised to learn that he had only had $25,000, which the shipbuilders gave him, with which to do it.

Shearer associated generally with the Navy members of the American staff, Pearson said, in the lobby of the hotel and in general. He associated, too, with newspapermen. He was admitted to press conferences, having exhibited credentials from the New York Daily News, Pearson testified. At the same time he was distributing literature which Senators Robinson and Allen, members of the committee, have described as violently anti-British and subversive of the conference. As fast as statements came from the delegations to newspapermen, Pearson said, Shearer was on hand to "interpret" them. His interpretations were usually correct, according to Pearson, but always with the anti-British slant and with "poison" seeping through them.

Pressed by Senator Robinson to be specific about the Naval officers, Pearson placed Admiral Reeves in a class by himself. Of him Pearson said:

"They were together (Reeves and Shearer) night after night." And at another point:

"The one man I heard most frequently express the hope that the conference would fail was Admiral Reeves. He was very loquacious."

"I would not say," he continued, "that the other members made the declaration that they hoped the conference would fail, but they frequently said: 'There must not be a repetition of the Washington conference.'"

Parity Demand Held Meant.

From this he and Robinson discussed the probability that what the experts had in mind was that there should be no agreement unless this country received parity. Many persons in this country believed that the United States got the worst of the Washington agreement, Robinson

ALLEN NAMES WITNESS WHO, HE CLAIMS, SAW MAN FLEE DEATH ROOM

WOMAN NEIGHBOR TELLS OF SCREAMS

Mrs. Roy Hearrin GiGves Grand Jury Details of Quarrel.

DESCRIBES PLEADING OF MRS. M'PHERSON

Letters to Parents of Dead Girl Alleged Husband as Cruel, Is Charge.

The naming of a new witness by Robert J. Allen, suspended policeman, to support his unwavering contention that Mrs. Virginia McPherson was murdered in her Park Lane apartment, featured the developments in the sensational grand jury investigation of the death of the pretty nurse.

E. Russell Bass, of apartment 301, of the Lombardy Building, which adjoins the Park Lane, was revealed by Allen as the man who will present further evidence to the effect that a man escaped from Mrs. McPherson's apartment by way of the roof on the night of her death. Bass lives just across an alley from the scene of the tragedy.

While Allen declined to reveal the exact nature of the evidence the new witness will offer, he said that it had something to do with a change on the roof that could have been made only by a person on the roof. This change occurred the night of the nurse's death.

Conclude Testimony Tonight.

The testimony which the grand jury has been receiving for the last two days is expected to be completed before midnight, Assistant District Attorney William H. Collins said last scheduled to be heard, among them Dr. Thomas Ballard, formerly of Gallinger Hospital and a former friend of Mrs. McPherson, and Dr. A. Magruder McDonald, deputy coroner, who performed the autopsy. The name of Dr. Ballard has been mentioned frequently in the testimony and trysts have been alleged between the physician and the nurse.

The jury has not finished questioning Inspector Shelby yet either, Collins said:

Collins called at Police Headquarters last night and conferred with Joseph F. Waldron, of the homicide squad, for about 15 minutes. He later admitted that the McPherson case was discussed but he had been seeking "only routine information."

Asked if he were contemplating any immediate arrests, he said: "I don't think so."

In reply to a question as to whether his opinion of the case had altered since the grand jury investigation opened, the assistant district attorne declared t .t he had never expressed an opinion on the case, notwithstanding the fact that he had been quoted as upholding the suicide theory.

Opinion Not Changed.

Waldron denied that the conference concerned the McPherson case but appeared willing to talk about the latest developments of the inquiry.

"We haven't changed our opinion about the suicide verdict," he said, "but we are willing to run down any new clews that are offered on the case."

A sensation in the case was sprung yesterday when Mrs. Roy Heavrin, a resident of the Park Lane Apartments, revealed that she had heard a violent quarrel and screams on the night Mrs. McPherson is believed to have met her death. In an interview with a Post reporter yesterday afternoon, after she had testified before the grand jury, Mrs. Heavrin declared that she distinctly heard a voice exclaim-

BUS DRIVER GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

Earl Reed Gets 18 Months' Sentence for Part in Motor Fatality.

FILED "ACCIDENT" PLEA

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 26.—A jury in the Circuit Court of Howard County today found Earl Reed, former bus driver for the People's Rapid Transit Co., guilty of manslaughter. The jury deliberated less than 45 minutes and Reed was sentenced by Judge William H. Forsythe, jr., to eighteen months in the house of correction.

Before pronouncing sentence, the judge told Reed he was extremely fortunate the accident was not much more serious. He pointed out that it could have resulted in the death of almost a score of persons.

The charge of manslaughter was returned by the Howard County grand jury last week, after investigation of an accident on the Washington boulevard, August 26, in which Herman Weigold, of Connecticut, was killed and his wife seriously injured.

Evidence at the trial was that Reed was driving more than 55 miles an hour and was trying to pass another automobile on a hill near the Herring Run Creek when the crash occurred. Passeners on the Washington-bound bus gave estimates varying from 40 to 60 miles an hour as the rate of speed.

In a plea to the jury Rowland K. Adams and Jerome A. Loughran, counsel for the defendant, denied the reckless driving charge and declared the "accident was unavoidable." Reuben D. Rogers, State's attorney for Howard County, prosecuted the case.

MRS. STONE GRILLED ON STAND IN TRIAL

Vigorously Denies Murder of Son as Evidence-Taking Is Ended.

CASE NEARLY FINISHED

Belair, Md., Sept. 26 (A.P.).—The murder case of Mrs. Hattie Stone, charged with the murder of her 15-year-old son, George, was given to the jury shortly after 11 o'clock tonight. State and defense arguments were closed after dinner recess, and the jury retired after being charged by Judge Walter W. Preston.

Belaire, Md., Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Mrs. Hattie Stone's fervent denials of guilt were put before the jury from her own lips today as her trial on a charge of murdering her son approached its end.

For two and a half hours she was on the witness stand, first reciting the details of the death of 15-year-old George Stone at their home in Havre De Grace, June 4, and then facing the barrage of questions by which State's Attorney W. H. Hopkins sought to bring admissions from her to fit into the picture of the case the State drew as the basis of its charges.

A few other defense witnesses were heard during the day, there was a brief rebuttal on minor points, and late in the afternoon the State's attorney and Harold E. Cobourn, defense counsel, launched into their final arguments, with Judge Walter W. Preston urging completion of the trial tonight.

Mrs. Stone's direct testimony was given calmly and varied but little

Queens Chapel Graveyard Soon to Give Up Its Bodies

Work of Transferring Them Will Be Started Within Next Few Days by Archbishop Curley to Make Way for School.

Another of Washington's famous landmarks, the old Queens Chapel graveyard at Eighteenth and Evarts streets northeast, is about to pass into oblivion.

Within the next few days Archbishop Michael J. Hurley, of Baltimore, will begin removal of the bodies of former Washingtonians, all members of the old Queens family, from the ancient cemetery to Mt. Olivet and other cemeteries in the District, so that the land, which was acquired under condemnation proceedings by the District some time ago, may be used to expand the playground facilities of the Langdon School.

The property in which the graveyard is located adjoins the old Queens Chapel on part of two acres deeded to the Catholic Church by Richard Queen, who inherited it in 1722 from his father, Charles Queen, who received a grant of some 140 acres from the British Crown in 1685.

The old chapel, which was destroyed by fire in 1775, in 1812, again during the Civil War, and still later was burned when it was struck by lightning, was unaffected by the transfer of the cemetery to the District government, and will not be demolished in the expansion of the school grounds.

It is believed that there are probably not more than ten persons buried in the old cemetery, the last interment having been in 1840 when John Randolph Queen, grandfather of Richard Queen Slye, of 212 A street southeast, the sole survivor of the Queen family in Washington, was buried there.

Records of the cemtery are incomplete now, and it is impossible to

Toller, German Dramatist, Held Back at Ellis Island

Once-Imprisoned Leader of Teuton Revolutions in 1918-19 Is Detained on Entry to U. S.; Officials Profess Ignorance of Orders.

New York, Sept. 26 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—and poet, who came to literary distinction while serving a five-year prison term for his part in the revolutions of 1918 and 1919, was detained by immigration officials when the Hamburg-American liner Reliance arrived here this afternoon.

Presumably the detention was because of his revolutionary activities and Communistic views, but all officials with whom the New York World News Service was able to communicate tonight professed ignorance of the matter. The officials on the ship said they had orders from Washington. Secretary of Labor Davis and his assistants ... Washington ... nothing of the detention, and Superintendent Baker, of Ellis Island, had not heard of it.

Herr Tolle, whose play "Man and the Masses" (Masse-Mensch) was produced here by the Theater Guild in the spring of 1924, spent tonight aboard the ship and tomorrow will go before a special board of inquiry at Ellis Island.

He was indignant when told he could not land.

"Why should I be barred?" he demanded in his slight English. "In England I have been invited to lecture before King's College at Oxford and Italy has welcomed me. Why not America?"

But the inspectors, remembering the incidents of Countess Cathcart and Count Karolyi, preferred to leave explanations to their superiors.

Toller is a young looking man at ... te ... ks of gray in his thick black hair. He said that he had foresworn all political connections and that he came to America expecting Ernst Toller, the German dramatist

ing. "For God's sake, don't do that! Oh, please don't do that."

This was the second time Mrs. Heavrin had testified. The first time she did not mention hearing the scream.

"My conscience hurt me," she said last night, "and I felt sorry for Mr. Allen, who having to fight all by himself."

Attorney Collins revealed last night that Mrs. Heavrin had given this information to the grand jury.

Police Had Same Evidence.

It was also learned that Mrs. Heavrin had given this evidence to police at the time the tragedy was first investigated, and that members of the homicide squad convinced themselves that the sounds emanated from an apartment in another building where a couple had been quarreling. The grand jury, it was reported, showed dissatisfaction with the decision, and for this reason asked that Mrs. Heavrin present as evidence what she had heard.

Robert A. McPherson, jr., husband of the dead woman, made his initial appearance before the grand jury yesterday afternoon. He entered the room at 1:30 o'clock and came out at 3:15 o'clock. As he emerged from the room young McPherson was smiling. He lit his cigarette, joined his mother and strolled up the corridor with her, chatting and laughing. McPherson will be recalled today, Collins said.

When the grand jury adjourned, shortly before 6 o'clock last night, Inspector William S. Shelby, head of the Central Detective Bureau, was being questioned. He had been closeted in the room for more than an hour when the recess was called. He will continue his testimony this morning.

Shelby Under Strain.

Shelby was noticeably agitated as he paced the corridor outside the grand jury room waiting to be called yesterday afternoon. "This is a terrible strain," he muttered, as he paced up and down.

Shelby was preceded by John Snure, a reporter on the Evening Star. Snure visited the scene of the tragedy soon after it was discovered on Saturday, September 14, and heard from Allen that he had evidence Mrs. McPherson had been murdered before the coroner's inquest was held. He has expressed the opinion that the young woman was slain.

Lieut. Edward S. Kelly, head of the homicide squad, was recalled to the stand during the afternoon. It is understood that he was questioned regarding his visit to the McPherson apartment Wednesday night, and his experiment in getting out of the window of the apartment. Allen was at the scene at the time, and accidentally saw Kelly emerge from the window.

Startled by Action.

"I felt all prickly behind the neck," Allen said yesterday, in recalling the incident, "when I saw the man come out of the window. Before I recognized the man as Kelly, I thought I was seeing the crime reenacted."

Both Kelly and Shelby maintain that a man could not be seen leaving the apartment through the window unless some one was making a special effort to see him.

Evidence expected to corrobrate the testimony of Mrs. Heavrin that she had heard a quarrel and screams was given the grand jury by James Mills, a janitor at the Lombardi Apartments, adjoining the Park Lane, and by Leonard Scott, switchboard operator at the Lombardi. Mills said that he was awakened by a scream on the morning of Friday, September 13. Scott is also supposed to have heard the scream.

Witnesses' Treatment Irks Allen.

Disgruntled over the manner in which he says certain witnesses in the hearing have been handled by the police, Allen announced last night that he is going to ask for a congressional investigation of the entire affair, headed by Senator Arthur Capper, a personal friend of his. Allen said that he is particularly annoyed over the way Policeman Lawrence Botts, of the Third Precinct, has been treated. Botts, according to Allen, was with him on the night Allen says he saw a man come from the McPherson apartment.

Allen claims that Botts has been given two grillings in the office of Inspector Shelby at headquarters, and that at the close of the second alleged grilling Wednesday, Botts was forced to sign a statement. Botts, according to Allen, testified before the grand jury after signing this alleged statement.

Allen also received a telegram last night from Mrs. V. C. Blackwelder, sister of Mrs. McPherson, in China Grove, S. C., to the discredit of McPherson. As quoted by Allen, the telegram read:

"McPherson did not love Virginia enough to dress her decently for burial, nor did he accompany the body home, or attend the funeral. Appreciate your interest."

Allen was also the recipient yesterday of congratulations from a delegation of South Carolina citizens for his interest in the case.

Alibi Witnesses Called.

Several alibi witnesses for McPherson were called during the day. They were Samuel Riggs, fellow employe of McPherson; J. Tarbor Howard, Tenis Jones, and Elmer Holland. Miss Sue Thompson and Mrs. Lillian Conway, telephone operators at the Park Lane, were recalled to the grand jury room yesterday to give further details of telephone conversations overheard between Mrs. McPherson and various friends.

Mrs. Conway was reported yesterday to have accused Allen of forcing her to offer certain testimony. Allen denied this and other witnesses said that the encounter between Allen and Mrs. Conway had nothing to do with false representations to testimony.

Letters, written by Mrs. McPherson to her father, A. A. Hurley, of Chester, S. C., were presented as evidence to the grand jury yesterday. The letters revealed that McPherson had been cruel to his wife and that he spent money she earned on his own amusements, it was reported.

Miss Eleanor Sheppard, a nurse and friend of Mrs. McPherson, may be brought from a sick bed to testify today. Miss Sheppard spoke to Mrs. McPherson on the telephone the night the young woman is believed to have died. Miss Sheppard has also reported that Mrs. McPherson told her of having a date with Dr. Ballard the week before she died.

MACDONALD, READY TO SAIL, HOPEFUL

ADVANCE SHIP SCHEDULE

By JOHN L. BALDERSTON.

London, Sept. 26 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Premier Ramsay MacDonald, on the eve of his departure for the United States, issued tonight through the Labor organ, the Daily Herald, his farewell message: "I am sorry to leave the country when the annual conference of the Labor party is about to open, because I should like to take part in the important business which it must transact, but I can not help myself.

"I go on a voyage of exploration. The greatest contribution which this generation can make to the history of the world is to establish peace amongst the nations and induce them to feel a sense of security, by political agreements carried out by judicial means. The United States and ourselves, having the same objects, should proclaim them with united voice. Good and cordial relations between us two can change the outlook for peace and give the world an energetic faith instead of hesitating scepticism.

"I go away to see what can be done, and with the help of my colleagues in the Labor movement and of every influence making for peace, who dares to say that success is impossible?"

Ship Schedule Advanced.

Because the Cunard Line is anxious to make sure that the Berengaria will reach New York next Friday morning so that the trip to Washington can be made on schedule, the giant liner will leave Southampton so early Saturday morning that the boat train from London will be run tomorrow night, when MacDonald and his party of eight, including two Scotland Yard officers, will travel from Waterloo Station to the boat, accompanied by about thirty English and American newspaper men.

Ambassador Dawes saw MacDonald at Downing street in a farewell visit this afternoon and then visited the foreign office and discussed the draft of the British invitations to France, Japan and Italy to the five-power naval conference here in January.

It is understood that Dawes later cabled this draft to Washington for the approval of the State Department and that it is hoped that Secretary Stimson's approval will be received in time for invitations to be forwarded to the other powers and announced either tomorrow or Saturday, but this is understood to depend upon agreement between Britain and the United States on one or two small points of the text.

Invitation Is Joint.

It is noteworthy as indicating the close accord at present existing between Washington and London that the invitation, ostensibly issued by Britain as the would-be host, is in reality a joint document whose text has been discussed and amended between Britain and the United States in conjunction with the British dominions.

No reliable information here is available as to the attitude of Italy or France. It is known that Japan will accept, although it is probable that Tokyo will make it known privately to the other powers that she will insist upon a ratio of seven to ten in cruisers as against Great Britain and the United States and that she will, therefore, fight hard for a program, since its adoption would force new building.

France and Italy are not expected to decline attendance at the conference. Whether they will insist on another and neutral capital for the conference, or whether they will make conditions in advance, is not yet known, but in both British and American quarters here there is some nervousness as to the attitude of Paris and Rome, which is in contrast to optimistic expressions cabled here from Washington.

Complaint Accusing Leading Distributors of Trade Restraint Ousted.

CREDIT RULES APPROVED

New York, Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Federal Judge Thacher today dismissed a complaint in which leading motion picture producers and distributors, including Paramount, Fox, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and First National, were charged by the Government with conspiracy in restraint of trade and violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

In the suit the Government attacked a set of credit rules adopted by the defendants for the avowed purpose of reducing losses they had been suffering through the transfer of theaters to new owners pending the performance of exhibition contracts.

The rules required each distributor to demand, under certain circumstances, security not exceeding $1,000 when the new owner refused to assume the contracts made by the previous owner.

Restraint Called Lacking.

Judge Thacher ruled that "all the badges of unreasonable restraint are lacking" in the case.

"There is no suppression of competition, nor any attempt to monopolize," his opinion said. "No one has complained except the Government. No injury to individual traders or to the public generally is disclosed. On the contrary, serious trade abuses have been eliminated, and both exhibitors and distributors have been benefited."

Judge Thacher found that the purpose in requiring the deposits was to induce the new owner to assume and perform the old contracts.

Edwin P. Grosvenor, of counsel for the defense, said after the decision was made public: "The decision of Judge Thacher is of great importance to business men and credit associations.

4,612 Transferred in 1928.

"In 1928, a typical year, there were 4,612 theaters transferred out of approximately 25,000 motion picture theaters in the United States. Nearly every transfer involved uncompleted contracts between the seller of the theaters and some of the distributors of pictures."

He said the aggregate involved in such uncompleted contracts was nearly $10,000,000 in 1928 and the losses to distributors amounted to more than $4,000,000.

The distributors named defendants in the suit distribute approximately 60 per cent of all films shown in the United States.

TORCH-KILLING TRIAL TESTIMONY IS ENDED

Scientists and Peacox Tell, in Different Language, How He Slew Girl.

SPANKING IS MENTIONED

White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 26 (A.P.). With talk ranging from erudite discussions of the finer points of psychiatry to blunt remarks on such homely matters as old-fashioned spanking, testimony was concluded today at the trial of Earle F. Peacox for the willful murder of his wife, whose body he soaked in oil and burned.

There were only three witnesses today, and they were all noted alienists called by the prosecution to refute previous expert testimony for the defense that Peacox was possessed of what the doctors termed a "psychopathic personality."

When Peacox's wife referred to the home he was trying to persuade her to return to as a "dump" and slapped his face on the first anniversary of their marriage, the defense brain doctors maintained, a "marked emotional impetus was superimposed on psychopathic personality," with the result that he was subject to an "emotional storm." During this storm, they said, he could not tell right from wrong, could not "appreciate either the nature or the quality of his acts," and so was not responsible when he felled the girl with his pistol, punched her in the face and choked out her life with his hands.

Peacox Puts It Simply.

Peacox himself had given much the same explanation of his act when he was on the witness stand, although he had phrased it more simply.

"She said, 'Well, I see you're still in the same old dump,'" he testified. "I said, 'That's more than you can say.'"

"She said, 'Is that so?' and I said, 'Yes, that's so,' and she slapped me and I slapped her. Then everything went black. When I came to I was sitting in a chair and Dolly was lying on the floor, her head in a pool of blood."

That was Peacox's story. The alienists called by his lawyer merely put in big words. The one spoke of "everything black" and the others of an "emotional storm," but it was the same story, and it was a story that the three doctors called by the people contradicted today.

Sane Always, Says State.

The State alienists said that the slick-haired 21-year-old radio instructor was sane now, sane at the time of the killing and sane throughout all his life. He was not a psychopathic personality, they insisted, and was not subject to emotional storms. It was while the defense was attempting to obtain an admission on this point that the reference to spanking was made.

Dr. Frank Robertson was on the stand, having followed Dr. Menas Gregory, of Bellevue, and Defense Attorney Sidney A. Syme reminded him of testimony that on one occasion Peacox had flown into a rage while mending a radio set, smashed the cabinet to pieces and wrecked the room. He offered the incident as an indication that the prisoner was the sort of character who might be overwhelmed by an emotional storm in which his violence would take the form of homicide.

"That," replied Dr. Robertson, speaking of the radio wrecking, "was not a symptom of emotional instability. It was anger. It could have been cured by spanking."

U. S. Grant's Son Dies in San Diego

Descendant of President, Prominent on Coast, Expires in Sleep.

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Ulysses S. Grant, 77, prominent San Diego resident and eldest son of former President U. S. Grant, died while asleep last night at Sahdberg Lodge, seventy miles north of Los Angeles, it was learned today. He apparently was in good health when he retired, friends said.

Born in Bethel, Ohio, in 1852, Grant received an A. B. degree at Harvard in 1876. He completed his law course at Columbia University and was his father's secretary during the last year of his presidential term. After serving as assistant U. S. District Attorney for the southern district of New York, and practicing law from 1878 to 1893, he moved to San Diego, opened a law office, and later built the $1,500,000 U. S. Grant Hotel here.

Grant is survived by his widow, two sons, Chaffee Grant, of San Diego; U. S. Grant, fourth, of Burlingame, and two daughters, Mrs. Jack Rice, of San Diego, and Mrs. Edmund King, of LaJolla. The other daughter, Mrs. I. H. Purdy, died in Oakland a few years ago.

Graf Zeppelin Carries 30 Passengers on Trip

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Sept. 26 (A.P.).—The dirigible Graf Zeppelin today carried 30 passengers on a nine-hour trip over Switzerland.

The Zeppelin Co. announced that another similar flight would be made on September 28.

Towner Sails for U. S. From Porto Rican Port

San Juan, Porto Rico, Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Horace M. Towner, retiring governor of Porto Rico, and Mrs. Towner sailed for New York today. Towner told an assemblage comprising the Porto Rican Regiment of the National Guard and a large body of school children which took part in farewell ceremonies that Porto Rico must find its final status under the American flag.

In New York Towner will confer with Col. Theodore Roosevelt, who is to be his successor here.

Light Expert Under Knife.

Chicago, Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Prof. Albert A. Michelson, 77, scientist, noted for his measurements of the speed of light, today was recuperating from a serious operation. The nature of the ailment was not made known. Just a year ago Prof. Michelson underwent an operation for the removal of gall stones.

THREE DEATHS LAID TO FANATICAL PLOT

Man, Who Calls Self "Grand Sheik" of Cult, Admits Killing Detective.

OTHER SLAYINGS BARED

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 26 (A.P.).—A Negro fanatic's plot to seize leadership in a quasi-religious mystic society was blamed today by authorities for yesterday's gun battle that cost the lives of two policemen and one cultist.

Ira Johnson, lanky, bewhiskered Negro, who calls himself the "grand sheik" of the Moorish Science Temple of America, confessed that he fired the shot that killed Detective William Gallagher.

He admitted, further, according to Assistant State's Attorney Harry S. Ditchburne, that he had planned to kill Charles Kirkman, whose kidnaping precipitated the shooting. Johnson, Ditchburne asserted, planned to put Kirkman to a ritualistic death, seize his credentials, and take charge of the cult.

Johnson also stood accused of another slaying. A Negro janitor pointed him out as the one who fatally stabbed Claude Greene, international treasurer of the cult, two months ago.

The grand sheik was the target of an attempted attack at today's inquest when Fred Hunt, brother-in-law of Gallagher, elbowed his way past witnesses and police and rushed at the Negro, exclaiming:

"You've caused a lot of grief for our family!"

Hunt was restrained by policemen.

Policeman Jesse B. Hults, wounded in the gun fight, died late today from his seven wounds. The cultist killed was John Stephenson, who was shot down when he fired in answer to an order to drop his gun. The coroner's jury, consisting of three negroes and three white men, adjourned this afternoon after hearing testimony of Johnson, Kirkman and police who took part in the fight. It will reconvene tomorrow, giving police time for further inquiry.

Youth to Die in Slaying Of Autoist-Benefactor

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 25 (A.P.).—Richard Nash Burrows, 19-year-old Chicago youth, today was convicted of first degree murder in his trial for the slaying of Jack Martin, of Mesa, Ariz., salesman, who had given the youth an automobile lift last April.

The jury imposed the death penalty.

The verdict was returned 14 hours and 20 minutes after the case was given the jury yesterday. As it was announced, Burrows, motionless, stared straight ahead. His foster mother, wife of a Chicago livestock dealer, collapsed.

Lindberghs Reach Venezuela Airport

Maracy Visited by Trail-Blazing Plane Flying From Trinidad.

Miami, Fla., Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Skimming across South American skyways on the return half of his 7,000-mile air mail tour, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh brought his trail-blazing plane down at Maracy, Venezuela, today, 3 hours and 50 minutes after he had taken off from Port of Spain, Trinidad, 415 miles away.

The colonel lifted his mail and passenger plane from the ground at Port of Spain at 10:35 a. m. and landed at Maracy at 2:25 p. m. His companions on the journey again were Mrs. Lindbergh, Juan T. Trippe, president of Pan-American Airways, sponsors of the commercial route which Lindbergh is inaugurating, Mrs. Trippe and the ship's crew.

Taking advantage of the clear weather which he encountered today in contrast to the intermittent squalls of yesterday, the colonel climbed out over the bow of the big amphibian and from the anchor compartment used his camera while the ship was in flight at an altitude of 1,500 feet. Lindbergh gave his passengers some worry, the radio operator reported, as he calmly continued to make pictures a few feet in front of the bow propeller. Mrs. Lindbergh operated her camera from a seat in the plane.

Hundreds Flee as Gas Leaks; Two Overcome

Berlin, N. H., Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Two workmen were overcome and 200 others affected by chlorine gas which escaped from a tank car in the rear of the Brown Co., paper manufacturing plant, here tonight.

A locomotive was shifting cars on the private railroad of the Brown Co. when a connection was broken, permitting gas to escape. As the gas had already been treated, it was not poisonous, but realizing the danger, Alfred Duval and George Piper rushed to stop the flow. They were overcome and the workmen in the plant were forced to seek the outside air.

MRS. STONE DENIES POISONING OF SON

from the reports of other witnesses on the incidents at the time her son died. But as the cross-examination got under way her voice rose often in sharp retorts when she felt the prosecutors questions implied suspicion of her acts.

She included some side comments which court spectators interpreted as indirect thrusts at her sister-in-law, Mrs. May Baker, who had testified Mrs. Stone admitted to her that she poisoned George to get money, and that she intended to leave the State with James Aberts, former boarder in the Stone home.

"Did you poison him?" the State's attorney asked, in the middle of his examination.

"I positively did not," Mrs. Stone answered, emphasizing each syllable.

She denied the prosecutor's charges of improper relations with several of the men whose names had been brought into the case, and when letters she sent from jail to Paul Jones, soldier stationed at Aberdeen, predicting her release, were read to the jury, her voice appeared to take on a note of defiance while she repeated her confidence she would soon be free.

Aberts was another defense witness and joined with Mrs. Stone in denying that they planned to "run away" together. Another point stressed by the defense during the day was testimony that Mrs. Baker, because she was the boy's aunt, would share in his insurance and estate should Mrs. Stone be barred from receiving the money by being convicted of killing him.

MRS. PANTAGES, ILL, TO FIGHT SENTENCE

Lawyer Says Wife of Rich Theater Man May Not Appear in Court.

NEW TRIAL TO BE ASKED

Los Angeles, Calif., Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Mrs. Lois Pantages, convicted of manslaughter for the death of Juro Rokumoto following an automobile collision, today was confined to her bed and physicians reported her condition as "extremely grave." The wealthy society woman collapsed last night when the verdict, which carries a prison sentence of one to ten years, was returned.

A bulletin issued this afternoon by Alexander Pantages, multimillionaire theatrical man, said his wife was suffering from severe shock and the crisis was expected late in the day.

"We do not know whether Mrs. Pantages will live or die," he said.

A staff of physicians, headed by Dr. E. C. Fishbaugh, was in attendance on the convicted woman at her home.

May Not Appear in Court.

Defense Attorney W. I. Gilbert expressed the belief that, because of Mrs. Pantages' condition, she would be unable to appear in court tomorrow for sentencing. He said he planned to ask the court for extension of her freedom, which was granted last night on the $50,000 bail in effect since her arraignment nearly three months ago.

Request for probation if a new trial is denied her, will be made by attorneys for Mrs. Pantages, they indicated late today.

Joseph Ford and Gilbert, representing the defense, said they would present a petition for probation on the grounds that Mrs. Pantages' health, already seriously undermined by court ordeal, would be endangered by imprisonment.

Their statement followed issuance of the formal bulletin by Pantages regarding his wife's condition.

New Trial Motion Today.

Motion for a new trial will be filed tomorrow, when Mrs. Pantages is scheduled to appear in court for sentencing. Should both motions of a new trial and probation be denied, the defense attorneys said they would carry their appeals to the highest court in the Nation.

Despite the vow taken by members of the jury convicting Mrs. Pantages not to tell what went on back of the doors of the jury room, it became known today that two of the men almost came to blows during the noon recess yesterday. The issue between the pair, it was said, hinged on whether the verdict should be manslaughter or second degree murder.

The investigation promised by District Attorney Buron Fitts into alleged perjury by defense witnesses in the trial got under way today. Fitts requested his deputies, James P. Costello, Harold Jones and A. H. Van Cott, who prosecuted Mrs. Pantages, to prepare reports for presentation to the grand jury next week. The reports will cover the trial testimony of three witnesses. Fitts said that if the testimony and evidence warrant it perjury indictments will be requested.

Four Die in Ship Fire; Ten More May Succumb

Mexico City, Sept. 26.—(A. P.)—Four persons were dead of burns here today and ten probably fatally burned as the result of a fire which destroyed a small ship anchored off the suburb of Riviera. The fire started last night when 14 persons were aboard the boat, being caused by an overturned lamp.

Thirteen passengers jumped into the water and were picked up by a launch, but the fourteenth, a small child, stayed aboard and was burned with the ship. Three of the injured persons have died in a hospital, while others remain in a serious condition.

Hawaiians Told Eruption Impends

Warning by Volcanologist Based on Earthquakes; Increasingly Severe.

Hilo, Hawaii, Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Warning was given today by Volcanologist Thomas A. Jaggar to people residing within 40 miles of the volcano Hualalai to be on guard against the severe earthquakes which have shaken the district on the island of Hawaii since Monday night.

Similar vibrations, said Jaggar, preceded the violent eruption of Mauna Loa in 1868, which was followed by a tidal wave along the west coast of the island. He advised the residents not to sleep in stone masonry buildings.

The quakes have been located by him as having their center near the fire pit of Mauna Loa. The heaviest shock rocked the island at 6:24 o'clock last night, destroying walls of buildings in its western part and ruining a seismograph at Kealakekua.

Jaggar, as the result of many years study of the volcanoes Kilauea, Mauna Loa and Hualalai, said there was a possibility that all might erupt simultaneously.

identify several of the bodies, although the archbishop has been making exhaustive researches which have brought to light a vast fund of new information regarding the Queen family and the old chapel and graveyard, which has been of material assistance in arranging the transfer of the bodies.

At the last session of Congress, Archbishop Curley was authorized to transfer the bodies, and his time since then has been devoted largely to a search through ancient archives of the District, Marlboro and other places where information might be found which would facilitate identity of the bodies and their proper reinterment.

Upon the death, in 1722, of Charles Queen, who obtained a grant of more than 140 acres under a patent from the British king, possession passed by inheritance to his son, Richard Queen. The original grant, now in possession of John Queen Sipe, is practically illegible, so that it is impossible to determine whether the patent was signed with the seal of King Charles II, who died in 1685, or James II, who succeeded him in the same year.

The land remained the property of Richard Queen until his death, some years later, the exact date being undetermined now. This owner bequeathed the 2 acres at Eighteenth and Evarts street to the Catholic Church, with the proviso that the land was to remain the property of the church so long as it continued to be used for religious purposes only.

At some later date, likewise uncertainly revealed by present records, an additional 40 acres of the property were willed to the Lutheran Church by an heir of Richard Queen and is still retained by the Lutherans of Washington.

When it was decided to reconstruct the old Langdon School, it became evident that the land occupied by the old Queen Chapel graveyard would be required as part of the school grounds, and in order to acquire the land, the District instituted condemnation proceedings against the church.

The land occupied by the chapel, however, was not required and, accordingly, was not affected by the condemnation suit. Although unoccupied for many years, the old Queens Chapel, last rebuilt in 1880 after it was struck by lightning, still stands.

Work is already under way and nearing completion on construction of a new sixteen-room building to replace the frame building which the Langdon School has occupied for many years.

When the new building, which includes a modern assembly hall and gymnasium, is put into operation about January 1, 1930, the old building will be razed.

Immediately after transfer of the bodies from the cemetery has been completed, work of remodeling the site as a playground will be started, it was stated yesterday by Maj. L. E. Atkins, Assistant Engineer Commissioner of the District.

LINDBERGH TO CHART JUNGLES FROM AIR

Location of Ancient Mayan Cities to Be Sought by Expedition.

PHOTOS WILL BE TAKEN

(Associated Press.)

An air expedition will be undertaken soon by Charles A. Lindbergh over the unexplored jungle areas of Central America, believed by archeologists to hold the key to the mysteries of the ancient Mayan civilization.

This announcement was made jointly yesterday by the Carnegie Institution of Washington and the Pan-American Airways, Inc., of New York, which are financing the venture.

The expedition will operate from Belize, British Honduras. It will get under way as soon as possible after Col. Lindbergh returns from his present South American trip.

Oliver Rickertson, of the Carnegie Institution, an authority on Mayan archeology and discoverer of several Mayan cities, will accompany Col. Lindbergh on his flights over sections of Guatemala, Honduras, British Honduras and the Mexican Provinces of Yucatan and Quintana Roo.

Aerial photographs will be taken of cities already discovered and those expected to be found, and the jungle regions will be charted from the air.

Dr. John C. Merriam, president of the Carnegie Institution, said the purpose of the undertaking is "to locate ruined cities which undoubtedly exist in the vast unexplored territory and photograph them and to map their location by compass bearings in such a way as to allow land parties to reach them in a fraction of the time that would be consumed in blind search through the jungles.

"It is hoped," he continued, "that there may be discovered and traced certain great highways through the jungles which were used by the Maya for intercity communication. It is also desired to determine how much of the plan and extent of an ancient Maya city can be made out from the air."

They Call It Politics

By CARTER FIELD

THE explanation of President Hoover's surprise statement in favor of the flexible provisions of the tariff is that Republican leaders had admitted to the President that they had little hope for passing them. The President was shocked at the lack of enthusiasm for what seemed to him the most important feature of the entire measure—certainly the most important in his judgment after the agricultural rates, about which there is little real controversy.

The attitude of the Republican leaders was that they were up against a real problem in getting enough votes to pass the bill at all. Under the surface the Republican leaders have been negotiating with individual Democratic and progressive Republican senators, seeking to win a vote here and two votes there by adding boosts to certain schedules. The surrender to the Northwestern "shingle" bloc is an evidence of this. But there are many others which are not so conspicuous.

There has been very little real enthusiasm among the Republican leaders about the flexible provision. It runs counter to the old rule of politics. Senators personally would much prefer to have most of the power left in their own hands. When a senator makes a personal fight to get a schedule raised, with considerable publicity in his home State newspapers, he gets the resulting credit if the raise goes through. Also if he slips over quietly, the interests affected have been in touch with him, and can be depended upon for a little gratitude at the next election.

BUT if this power has been delegated to the President, and he raises the rate in the interest of the State or the particular interest, there is a much smaller chance of the senator getting the credit.

For Presidents can not be depended upon to do what Mr. Coolidge did just before the end of his term in behalf of the new Republican member, Lankford, from the Norfolk, Virginia, district. Mr. Lankford was terribly interested in getting the tariff on peanuts raised by the executive order. Mr. Coolidge decided that the case of the peanut growers against the Chinese peanut growers had merit. But before he acted he notified Mr. Lankford, so he could tell his friends back home that the President would do this—on his recommendation, of course—the following day.

This was splendid politics from the party standpoint. Mr. Coolidge did not need the exclusive credit for this action, but it was just about as important to Mr. Lankford in his district as any action by the Federal Government could possibly be. And it at least helped to pave the way to a possible holding of that district, regarded normally as heavily Democratic, in the Republican column next year.

ALL of which explains, however, why Republican senators, and for that matter some of the Democrats, did not want to sacrifice the right to take all the credit when any change in the tariff is made. It is always easy to provide an alibi against taking the blame, so that phase of it does not trouble them.

So the Republicans, just prior to Mr. Hoover's statement, had about decided that this was one phase of the bill which they could sacrifice, and thus make perfectly idle all the Democratic criticism of this particular feature. As the Democrtas were attacking it even more than they were assailing the sugar schedule, this seemed to the Republicans shrewd strategy. Also it seemed to make their path easier in picking up a few additional Democratic votes for the bill as a whole, to offset further possible progressive Republican defections.

Aside from the small group of Democrats who are openly in favor of the bill there are a scattered group who secretly want the measure to pass because of schedules which would benefit their States, or at least certain important interests in their States. The Republican leaders of course know all the details of each of these situations, these having been disclosed when the senators in question arranged to have the increases they desired put in the bill when it was still in committee. It is in this group, of course, that the best prospects lie for getting the extra votes which may be necessary to pass the bill should progressive Republican defections become more serious.

* * * *

BUT the concentrated fire of the Democratic organization on the bill as a whole has made this task difficult, while the decision of the Democratic leaders, particularly Simmons, Robinson and Harrison, to hold up the flexible schedule as the worst feature of the whole measure, had complicated the task still further Hence the willingness of the Republican leaders to throw this provision, for which they cared very little anyhow, overboard.

Meanwhile the President, by his statement in favor of the provision, has for the first time since the fight on the bill started become the real target for Democratic attack. They assert that he has lined up with the reactionary element of his party.

All of which gives the Democratic leadership great joy, for it is the first move made by Mr. Hoover since his inauguration on which they could all unite in attacking him without misgivings as to their own minorities.

In view of the popular clamor for "taking the tariff out of politics," however, there is some little apprehension as to wether this attack on the President will prove popular.

REEVES CHARGES M'LEOD BILL FAILS IN PURPOSE

regard to compensation for motor mishap victims, the chamber, through its general manager, castigates the proposed financial responsibility law for Washington as a "hasty, half-baked substitute" for a real solution of one of motordom's most acute problems.

"If a State feels that it has the duty to provide compensation for injured persons," says Reeves, "then let us have a plan that will bring relief to the injured parties promptly and without recourse to the law courts. The general intention of the so-called financial responsibility law may be humanitarian, but the details are too insurance-minded.

"What the law does under certain circumstances is to require a large number of citizens to take out insurance. Then injured parties, if any, may bring suit against the insured, with the insurance companies fighting to see that the injured parties win as little compensation as possible. Such a tangled and indirect method is a hasty, half-baked way of approaching an important problem. These measures as adopted today include so many grave faults that it is better to have normal legal procedure than to try a cure which only complicates the situation."

There are eight excellent reasons for opposition to the law which is proposed for the District of Columbia, and which is similar to that recently enacted in several States, in the opinion of Mr. Reeves. Such a law, he says:

Fails to reduce or to guarantee compensation to the victims of motor mishaps

Is influenced more by insurance practice than public policy.

Uses the police power of the State to get business for insurance companies.

Makes the State motor vehicle department a collector of judgments.

Compels the injured party to go to the expense of legal processes.

Haggles over the questoin of fault instead of concentrating on relief of the injured

Penalizes the poor man who can not afford the best legal talent.

Penalizes the motorist for minor infractions of the law.

"It has been claimed for such a law," says Reeves, "that it will discourage carelessness, reduce accidents, compensate the injured, banish junk cars, and eliminate undesirables from the highway. There is no evidence to indicate that the law is successful in any of these respects, and certainly there are more direct methods of accomplishing such ends.

More Heedless Than Ever.

"If the deterrents of fines and imprisonment do not eradicate carelessness, we can hardly hope that insurance will do so. In fact, a naturally careless man is likely to be even more heedless if he has insurance. The States which have adopted the so-called financial responsibility laws have not, since their adoption, recorded any encouraging progress in accident reduction.

"If there are certain classes of persons who ought not to operate motor cars, this can be handled directly instead of by the indirect method of insurance restrictions.

"Similarly, if it is desirable to clear the junk cars off the highway, this can be done by a certificate of title and junking laws which deal with the problem as such.

"In other words, if the law has a meritorious aim we do not need to overlook it, but we can reach the same result in so far as many of its alleged virtues are concerned without getting into the extensive inconveniences and expense which this type of measure involves."

The obvious unfairness of using the police power of the State or District of Columbia to put motor ordinance violators in the hands of insurance companies or making the State the collector of judgments is one that will appeal to all fair-minded persons, in Reeves' opinion.

That such a law might be used as a means of petty persecution of motorists at the same time it makes the policeman a virtual salesman for the insurance companies, a charge previously brought against the proposed statute, is sustained by Reeves' study of the facts. In New Jersey, for instance, where imposition of the law is a boast of the A. A. A., there are 32 violations under which the motor vehicle authorities may compel a motorist to take out insurance. Among these are many which appeal to observers as patently ridiculous considered in the light of indicating the car owner to be a dangerous specimen.

List of Violations.

A list of such violations includes:
Improper use of chains.
Improper use of signaling devices.
Lights out of focus.
Failure to carry operator's license.
Leaving motor running.
Failing to notify commissioner of change in address.
Coasting with gears in neutral
Following another car too closely.

"In short," says Reeves, "while the law presumably may be drawn to cover only those whose conduct indicates that they might be involved in an accident, actually, it may be so framed that virtually any driver may be compelled to take out insurance."

"Ambulance chasing," an evil which has been so vociferously fought by the American Automobile Association sponsor of the McLeod bill, will grow on an unprecedented scale as a result of such a law, the general manager of the N. A. C. C. is convinced.

In voicing the industry's vigorous objections to "half-baked, insurance-minded" solutions of the problem of relieving victims of motor mishaps, Reeves goes on record in favor of a substantial solution when one can be found.

"If some measure of compensation is needed," he says, "let it be provided in a more simple manner and after exhaustive study of the facts."

In this fashion does the agency which has done more than all others for the individual motorist's interests go on record as opposing the imposition of quack panaceas upon the motorists of the District of Columbia.

pointed out, and Pearson finally made this observation:

"I think they were convinced after the first few days or a week or so at any rate that parity would not be achieved."

But Pearson cited one particular instance where he thought the attitude of the American naval men militated against success. It was a situation, he said, where the British had tentatively conceded the American demand of total tonnage and had asked the American delegates to submit a proposition of just how it would be divided in smaller and heavier cruisers. The American delegates would not do it. Such a situation developed, as well as he could ascertain in his capacity as a newspaper man, he said:

Several Officers Named.

The officers he named as frequently associating with Shearer were Rear Admiral Frank H. Schofield, Commander H. H. Frost and Commander H. C. Train. With Reeves, they stopped at the same hotel as Shearer He was frequently in on their discussions.

Before Robinson had asked him to be specific, Pearson had given it as his impression that all of these men were "sympathetic" to Shearer.

Pearson was anxious to make it clear that Ambassador Gibson and Admiral Hilary P. Jones, this country's actual delegates to the parley, did everything they could to bring about an agreement. Of Jones, he said: "He was on the square."

Allen Seeks Specific Data.

Senator Allen went down the list of naval officers at the conference.

"How about Admiral Long?" he asked.

"Oh, you couldn't get anything out of him with a 10-foot pole," Pearson replied.

"How about Schofield?"

'He was not very talkative, but I think Shearer got him to open up one night."

"Commander Frost?"

"Well, he was the youngest member of the delegation and naturally did not have much to say."

Consents to Give Names.

Allen was trying to get him to relate some actual conversation that he had heard on which he based his impressions. Pearson was reluctant to testify except in a general way and asked Allen that if he as a newspaper man should answer the questions.

Allen replied: "Yes, as a newspaper man."

It was not until Robinson had told him that he thought he should be specific, in fairness to the naval officers at Geneva, however, that Pearson suddenly said:

"I think you are right, senator," and then told about Reeves.

Correspondents Opposed Shearer.

It was apparent that Pearson was one of two American correspondents who did not like Shearer's activitics at Geneva and would not accept his "interpretations." The other was Alvin Johnson, of the New York World In fact, Johnson complained to Gibson about Shearer, and went to the trouble to dig up, according to Pearson, what purported to be a Scotland Yard report on Shearer.

Johnson showed him this report. Pearson testified and, as well as he could recollect, it involved Shearer among other things in the "McCoy jewelry theft." Senator Allen suggested that this was "Kid" McCoy former pugilist, now serving a sentence in the California Penitentiary in connection with the death of his fourth wife.

Pearson said the report had to do with purported investigations of Shearer, and that knowing where Johnson got the document he accepted it as authentic. So far as he knew, Scotland Yard had never gotten enough on him to make an arrest.

Shearer Obtained Document.

Later, here in Washington, he ran into Shearer in a hotel, he said, and Shearer told him that he had gone into Johnson's room in Geneva and gotten the report.

"I suppose that he threatened him, and Johnson, being a little fellow, gave it up," Pearson said.

Shearer told him at the time, Pearson related, that the report was all "bunk" and that Johnson had been circulating it just to hurt him. Shearer also told him Pearson said, that he had had Johnson discharged from the World for doing this. Johnson has not been discharged.

Testimony Upsets Shearer.

Shearer seemed to thoroughly enjoy the first part of Pearson's testimony as it related to his activities at Geneva, but when the Scotland Yard narrative got under way he grimaced, squirmed in his chair and kept pointing to Pearson and mumbling:

"He's British He's British."

Then when Pearson left the stand Shearer almost had a fit.

"Bring that bird back," he said 'Don't let him get away."

It developed that he wanted the committee to ask him if he had not represented the Japanese Advertiser at the conference, and Pearson pointed out that he had told the committee this at the outset and that the Advertiser is American-owned The Advertiser, however, was only one of the papers he represented, he said. His stories were used by The Washington Star, for example, he added.

Pearson Refutes Suggestion.

Then Shearer wanted him asked whether or not he was related to Leander McCormick-Goodhart, Commercial Attache of the British Embassy. Pearson replied that McCormick-Goodhart was the cousin of his former wife.

He then left the witness stand again, but when the significance of the question dawned upon him he returned and reestablished his Americanism by pointing out that McCormick-Goodhart was also related in the same capacity to Col R. R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, whom Shearer had toward the island. Shipping, however, continued to ply yesterday between Havana and Key West.

No word had come out of Nassau last night since sortly after noon Wednesday and fears were entertained that the storm may have been severe there. The Tropical Radio, which has a station at Nassau, was talking with its stations at Bimini and West End and with the British freighter Domira aground off the Great Abaco yesterday, but there was no news of Nassau

All except three of the crew of the Domira abandoned ship today when the seas subsided sufficiently to allow them to use lifeboats.

No Lives Lost.

No lives were lost in the hurricane on Eleuthera Island, said the report to the Tropical Radio at Miami. The message was sent from Governors Harbor, a midpoint on the western central coast of the island, but communications outside that town were lacking.

Bimini Island, 40 miles east of Miami, had 30 miles of wind from the north yesterday morning and similar low velocities were reported from other points which had radio communication. Meteorologists said the storm would gather intensity as long as it remained at sea. A vessel messaged Havana late today from the Bahamas that it was experiencing a hurricane of 80 miles an hour. The storm center, this ship reported, was almost stationary.

Miami, Fla., Sept. 26 (A.P.).—The Tropical Radio station here announced tonight that it had been in communication at 8:18 o'clock with the Italian freighter Laconia, reported earlier in the day from Hamilton, Bermuda, as having foundered west of the Bahamas with all on board. The message from the captain of the Laconia said, "Have been in no trouble."

Harris Defends Work At West End Market

Criticism made recently by the West End Citizens Association that the new meat stalls erected in the West End Market are unsatisfactory and show poor workmanship were answered yesterday by A. L. Harris, municipal architect, who declared that the association's complaint was without foundation.

"We have had the stands examined by experts and they are fully up to standard," said Harris. "We were given a certain sum of money with which to do a certain job, and we have done that work and are satisfied that it is above criticism."

BROOKHART INVITED TO BARE RUM PARTY

reported to his shipbuilder employers as having instructed his Geneva corresponded to "let Shearer's stuff run."

At the morning session it became clearly apparent that the shipbuilders, as early as January, 1928, or perhaps a few weeks earlier, were trying frantically to shake Shearer off their shoulders. They insist they sent him to Geneva as an observer, but Shearer had come back and told them quite frankly that he did not confine himself to observing, and in letters to them he kept pointing out that he kept them advised of his activities, and at no time did they call a halt or express disapproval. The conference was wrecked, and he posed as the wrecker.

The three shipbuilding firms, as Senator Robinson expressed it, were "discharging him collectively and severally." Yet S. W. Wakeman, vice president of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., continued to give him money until March of this year.

Wilder Paid Him $9,000.

In January of 1928, when Lawrence R. Wilder, head of the skeleton organization, Trans-Oceanic Co., came to Washington to campaign in behalf of a plan for four-day transatlantic liners and changes to the merchant marine act, he employed Shearer again. Shearer got some $9,000 from him and later put his lawyer on Wilder's track for $10,000 more.

This claim was not pressed, however, and Wilder testified that he had heard nothing more from Shearer.

Wilder was president of the American Brown-Boveri Electrical Corporation, one of the three firms that sent Shearer to Geneva. He denied any knowledge of this trip, however. It was handled by Clement L. Bardo, vice president Employed Shearer Later.

By January, 1928, however, Wilder had ceased being president and had taken over the Trans-Oceanic Co. the sole purpose of which was to advance the four-day liner scheme and get better shipping legislation The four-day ships got the newspaper headlines, the legislative assistance was given and nothing more has been heard of the four-day ships

Wilder said frankly that they formed the "romantic background." but insisted that he still hopes that he some day can do something about the four-day vessels At the outset of this campaign he employed Shearer after Bardo had had a "violent quarrel" with him.

Satisfied With Investigation.

Despite Bardo's protests, Wilder revealed that he had Shearer investigated and was satisfied with him. For one thing, his investigator reported:

"Loyalty unquestioned."

Another thing Wilder learned was that his Americanism ran back to Revoluntionary stock, he said, explaining that there had been reports to the contrary. His disagreement with Bardo was that Bardo wanted to "get from under," while Wilder insisted the shipbuilder should acknowledge Shearer "in the open" and carry on with him proudly.

Gaming and Rum Counts Dropped.

Because of insufficient evidence, Assistant District Attorney David A. Hart dropped charges of possession of liquor and violating the gaming laws against Thomas Horan, 34, of 523 Seventh street southwest, and possession of liquor against John M Hickey, of 406 Seventh street southwest. The men were arrested Tuesday by a squad of Fourth Precinct police at 523 Seventh street southwest.

THREE DEFY STORM ON STRANDED SHIP

All Others of 30 Aboard the Domira Are Landed From Lifeboats.

CRAFT'S RADIO WEAKENS

Miami, Fla., Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Braving the heavy seas churned by the approach of a tropical disturbance, all except 3 of the 30 members of the crew and officers of the British freighter Domira, carried aground off Abaco Island, Bahamas, yesterday, took to the steamship's lifeboats today and landed safely at a nearby settlement.

A radio operator, who remained aboard the storm-buffeted craft with the captain and one other person, told the story of the abandonment of the Domira in a series of messages, parts of them unintelligible, picked up by the Tropical Radio here.

No details could be learned of the journey to safety made by the members of the crew who manned the lifeboats, nor was it known how long they were in the water before reaching Great Guana Cay, where they were believed to be tonight. However, when they quit the boat the seas were considerably calmer than they were yesterday

The Domira continued to withstand the terrific pounding of high winds and was said to be intact with the exception of the rent in its hull made when it went aground. This opening, however, resulted in the flooding of the engine room and left the ship's radio set dependent on batteries for its power.

Late today the radio signals grew fainter and the batteries appeared to be weakening under the heavy demands made upon them. The possibility that the three yet aboard soon might lose contact with the outside world through radio was seen by land operators.

It was believed in some quarters that the lighthouse tender Firebird, of the Bahamas government, which was held in Nassau Harbor yesterday by the threat of the storm, was proceeding to the assistance of the Domira, but the last word received from the ship said that no rescue craft had appeared up to that time.

15 U. S. CAVALRYMEN SAVED FROM FLOOD

Nearly Dozen Horses Are Drowned in Currents of Swelled Creek.

HEAVY RAIN CONTINUES

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Heavy rains, chiefly in the northwest section of the State, which have been in progress the past 36 hours, were steadily gaining momentum tonight and had wrought heavy road and crop damage in South Carolina.

The only reports of the casualties caused by the floods came from Greenwood, where nearly a dozen horses were drowned. The animals, moving with the troop of the Sixth United States Cavalry from Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., to Camp Jackson, Columbia, were swept off their feet by the current in Ninety-Six Creek.

Fifteen members of the troops narrowly escaped drowning at the same time. The creek had been swollen by heavy rains of the past 24 hours.

Official weather prognostications indicated little relief was in sight. Richard H. Sullivan, United States meteorologist here, said late today he was practically certain there would be a continuance of the heavy rains.

It has been officially reported to the State highway department that points had been closed on nine highways in the State. Road closings were reported in Greenwood, Abbeville, Laurens, Oconee and McCormick counties, where the rains had approached in intensity the floods of northwestern North Carolina a year ago.

In addition, dispatches from Greenville, related that the Tyger River bridge between Cross Anchor and Union, near the Union-Spartanburg County lines, had been washed away.

Definite reports came from Greenville and Spartanburg that the cotton crop had been materially damaged by the rains. Dr. W. W. Long, of the extension department of Clemson College, said that in his opinion the losses would be heavy, the Piedmont Section suffering the most. Near Spartanburg, the mill village of Beaumont was menaced by rising waters.

Man Held, One Flees After Wild Auto Chase

After a wild chase on Glenbrook road from Bethesda to Battery Park last night, Montgomery County Policeman James E. Shoemaker, of the Bethesda substation, seized a light roadster with a load of alleged liquor and arrested one of the two occupants. One man escaped.

Shoemaker saw the car as it passed the substation and gave chase. Two colored men were in it. After a chase of several miles the policeman overtook the speeding car and the occupants jumped out and ran. Shoemaker caught one, who gave his name as Nathaniel Snowden, colored, 32 years old, 2726 P street northwest. He was charged with transporting and illegal possession of intoxicants with intent to sell. Justice of the Peace A. L. Moore fixed bond at $500 and set the date of hearing at the Rockville police court for October 1. The policeman found 24 quarts of alleged liquor in the car, he reported.

Maryland Man Fined $100 for Drunk Driving

George Wilson, Lay Hill, Md., yesterday was convicted of charges of driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor by Judge Charles W. Woodward in Montgomery County Police Court at Rockville. Judge Woodward imposed a fine of $100 for drunken driving and $1 for failure to carry his permit, with an alternative of 123 days in jail.

Wilson was arrested Labor Day by Headquarters Detective Roy Bodner, of Rockville, in Potomac. Bodner was in police headquarters at Rockville when telephoned complaints were received that a car had been driven in a reckless manner on the pike and had narrowly missed another car. Several witnesses testified that Wilson had been driving in an erratic manner. He appealed the decision to the circuit court and bond of $200 was fixed.

SMITH ISSUE DEAD, POLLARD ASSERTS

Candidate for Governor in Virginia Pleads for Democratic Unity.

DENIES FINANCIAL HELP

Special to The Washington Post.

Herndon, Va., Sept. 26.—The Smith and Raskob issue in Virginia is dead, John Garland Pollard, of Lynchburg, Democratic candidate for Governor of Virginia, declared before a capacity crowd in the Herndon School Auditorium tonight to open his campaign in this section of the State.

"The welfare of the Democratic party in this State is at stake," he asserted. "Do not let past differences disrupt the party now. The Smith and Raskob issue is dead. The issues of religion, prohibition and Tammany Hall used in the national election are dead issues here now. In htis connection I want to deny emphatically a report that I am receiving any money from either Smith or Raskob. The national Democratic organization is not contributing any funds whatsoever for this campaign."

Mr. Pollard, in a comprehensive talk, outlined in detail the major planks of his program in which he mentioned at the outset the need for a large State health department for the protection principally of children. Equal opportunity for the poor, as well as the rich, in public education also is an outstanding need, he declared, in claiming that appropriations for education should be increased.

Better care of orphan children also was cited as a major plan. He declared that the present law providing for the care of orphans upon the death of the father should be abrogated to provide funds for the mother to keep the children in the event of the father's death.

He placed himself on record also as favoring the reduction of the State road tax "when the time comes;" the maintenance of the present gasoline tax as against the proposed reduction by the opposition party of one-half cent on a gallon, action which, he said, would be ridiculous; and enforcement of the prohibition laws.

In discussing his tasnd as a "bone-dry" advocate, Mr. Pollard contended that the State liquor laws were better enforced by the Democratic administration in Virginia than the Volstead act as enforced by the Republican national administration.

Mr. Pollard was introduced by M. D. Hall, Democratic nominee for the House of Delegates from Fairfax County. Short talks also were made by R. Carlton Lewis, of Centerville, who presided, and by Representative R. Walton Moore, of Fairfax.

Pair Hurt at Crossing Lose Damage Actions

Special to the Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 26.—A verdict for the defense, the Norfolk & Western Railroad, was given on direction of Judge W. E. Baker late this afternoon in Federal court here in the suits of Miss Lucille Kilmer for $50,000, and James Morison, son of Dr. G. P. Morison, of Shepherdstown, W. Va., for $5,000, both arising from personal injuries sustained when the car in which they were driving to Shepherdstown last December was hit by a Norfolk & Western train at a grade crossing.

Judge Baker found no contributory negligence on the part of the defendant. He indicated the plaintiffs had not exercised proper caution.

BORAH LEADS OPPOSITION TO FLEXIBLE TARIFF PLAN

new conditions may warrant had better be corrected and made by the President, after investigation and report by the tariff commission, as the existing law provides."

Borah emphasized that he was not assailing the President for issuing his statement on the flexible principle, but he thought it was Hoover's duty now to "advise this body and the country in the same plain and specific way whether the industrial schedules in this bill meet with his approval."

He would have condemned the President's action, Borah said, had it not been for the fact that executives have been doing the same thing in matters pending before Congress for more than 60 years.

It was not his idea, however, he added, of the division of duties among Government branches as provided in the Constitution.

The Idahoan attacked the flexible provision as having operated in an inflexible manner because all but 5 of 37 applications to the Tariff Commission had resulted in increased duties.

The original purpose of the clause, he said, was to permit a reduction in rates, enacted in 1922 to maintain war level prices, without waiting for a general revision by Congress. The direction of the piecemeal division had been only in one way, however, he said, and that was upward. Not a single reduction of moment had resulted, he contended.

In a statement issued last night by the Democratic national committee, Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, ranking Democrat on the finance committee, disclosed that his proposal for repeal of the flexible provisions, if adopted, would be followed by the offering of an amendment to make the Tariff Commission report to Congress through the President.

The President would not proclaim rates under the Democratic plan, but would report to Congress the commission's findings with his recommendations. This was the method followed before the 1922 law was enacted, Simmons said, adding that Democrats have consistently opposed the flexible provisions.

In another statement issued by the national committee, Senator Barkley, Democrat, Kentucky, alluded to the employment by Senator Bingham, Republican, Connecticut, of an employe of the Connecticut Manufacturers Association to assist him in his tariff labors, and said this "simply illustrates the unusual methods adopted by the Republican party in writing a bill for the benefit of special interests."

"That this conduct was a sore breach of propriety is not to be disputed," Barkley said, adding that Bingham was not the only offender.

Senator Reed disagreed with Borah that the pending issue was between agriculture and industry.

He saw in the Idahoan's speech a "caustic criticism of the President for invading our field," despite Borah's contention that he was not finding fault with the Executive's action.

Fletcher Is Disgusted.

"The trouble with the attacks on the flexible provisions and the whole bill," Reed asserted, "is that these gentlemen who have appointed themselves spokesmen for agriculture—and I deny their right to do it—are trying to draw down the rest of the country to the level of agriculture while we are trying to bring agriculture up to the level of the rest of the country."

Senator Fletcher said it disgusted him not to be able to "go along with the very large majority of my Democratic colleagues" on the flexible issue.

TWO WOMEN HURT AS BUS HITS BRIDGE

Driver Says He Was Forced to Veer to Avoid Crash With Automobile.

HELD UNDER CHARGES

Two persons were injured, neither seriously, last night, when a Washington Railway & Electric Co. bus, bound from Laurel to Tenth and E streets northwest, crashed into the railing of the bridge over the Northwest branch of the Anacostia River on Prospect avenue, Brentwood.

Mrs. Mary Scheidrot, 2714 Seventeenth street northeast, was taken to Sibley Hospital in a passing automobile and treated for shock and bruises. Her condition was declared not serious. Miss Doris Foster, 3826 Thirty-second street, Mount Rainier, Md., also suffered shock and bruises, but did not require medical treatment, police reported.

The bus was driven by William B. Huntt, 25, 1302 E street southeast, who told Town Marshal R. E. Brown of Brentwood that another car was approaching the bridge at the same time the bus arrived. He said he slowed down and then, expecting the auto to stop, started ahead again. The car failed to stop and he was forced to run against the side of the bridge to avoid hitting the car.

Passengers on the bus told Marshal Brown that there was no other traffic on the road at the time. The front end of the bus was damaged and the damage to the bridge is expected to amount to several hundred dollars, police say. There were five passengers on the bus at the time of the accident.

Brown took Huntt before Justice of the Peace Isaac D. Arnold, of Brentwood, for preliminary hearing on charges of reckless driving. Judge Arnold held him for action of the Hyattsville branch of Prince Georges County Police Court next Wednesday. Howard L. Dove, of the Washington Railway & Electric Co., posted bond of $100 for the appearance of Huntt.

Spotswood Club To Be Auctioned

Estate, With Golf Course and House, Scheduled to Satisfy Debts.

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 26.—The Spotswood Country Club, with its nine-hole golf course and spacious stone clubhouse, located on a 90-acre tract on the Spotswood trail, 2 miles east of Harrisonburg, will go on the auction block October 24 to satisfy debts secured by deeds of trust on the property, it was announced here yesterday by John Paul and D. Wampler Earman, attorneys acting as trustees.

The Spotswood Country Club, which is owned by 200 Harrisonburg residents, was established in 1926, and more than $80,000 has been expended in its development. The golf course, considered one of the best in this part of the country, is the work of Fred Findlay.

While the club was able to pay its operating expenses, officials said, the revenue was not sufficient to carry the indebtedness, approximating $45,000, on the property.

The Spotswood course is the second offered at public auction in the Shenandoah Valley this year. The other was Shenvalee, at New Market, a public resort.

New Dam Core to Give Strasburg More Water

Special to The Washington Post.

Strasburg, Va., Sept. 26.—Strasburg will have a 20,000,000-gallon water supply when the concrete core for the impounding dam in the Little Fort Valley is completed, according to H. L. Borden, contractor. The core will be 12 feet high and is being built directly on top of the old core, which terminated 10 feet below water level. Seepage, a serious factor during the recent shortage, will be eliminated. The work will cost $6,000.

The impounding dam was built in the Little Fort Valley in 1922 by Brady Brothers, Lonaconing, Md., engineers. It was necessary to dig a 1,700-foot tunnel to carry water through the Massanuten Mountain east of town.

HOOVER DISOBEYS BORAH.

Senator Borah seems to have conceived the idea that he was to become keeper of the President's conscience when Mr. Hoover accepted his advice and called an extra session of Congress. Mr. Hoover's insubordination in the matter of the debenture should have warned Mr. Borah that it is a very difficult task to direct executive affairs by proxy. Now Mr. Hoover sees fit to disagree with Mr. Borah on the flexible tariff provision.

The Idaho senator takes a curiously twisted path in discussing this development. He would have resented executive interference in pending legislation if Mr. Hoover's offense had been the first, but Presidents for 60 years have indulged in the habit. So Mr. Borah does not criticize the President for speaking out. In fact, he now demands further interference from the White House. Now that Mr. Hoover has entered the controversy, Mr. Borah reasons that the President must assume responsibility for the entire bill before it has been perfected and sent to him for signature or disapproval. "It is the duty of the President," says Mr. Borah, "to advise this body and the country in the same plain and specific way whether the industrial schedules in this bill meet with his approval."

If the industrial schedules proposed by the Senate committee were based upon a departure from Republican tariff principles, there would be some merit in Mr. Borah's demand for a statement of the President's attitude toward them. Probably the President would not wait to obtain the advice and consent of the Idaho senator before expressing his opposition to such a departure from party pledges and principles. But since the industrial schedules are made up in conformity with the protective principle and in accordance with Mr. Hoover's recommendation that industries confronted with insurmountable competition should have tariff protection, there is no occasion for Mr. Hoover to discuss the schedules. The specific duties proposed in each case are subject to change in the Senate and in conference. The Senate, for the time being, is in charge of the bill, and can make such changes as it pleases. So long as a tariff bill aiming at the protection of agriculture, industry and labor is in the making, in harmony with Republican pledges, there is no occasion for presidential comment or interference.

Presumably, if the President's statement had advocated a betrayal of Republican tariff pledges, there would have been no complaint from Senator Borah.

The suggestion that changes of rates under the flexible provision will always be upward and against the interests of the farmer has no merit. Who can prove that President Hoover is an enemy of the farmer and is plotting his destruction, and that Senator Borah is the only friend upon whom the farmer can rely? Surely Senator Brookhart would dispute the claim that the farmer has no friend except the senator from Idaho. Mr. Hoover's insistence upon flexibility in emergency tariff-making, within limitations, is in the interest of agriculture as well as industry and labor. He would adapt tariff changes to economic conditions as they arise. Common honesty, which is not unknown among Presidents of the United States, would result in downward revisions if downward revisions were found to be necessary or advisable. The country is in a sad state, indeed, if it can not trust its President to change tariff rates upward or downward within fixed limits, according to economic conditions.

Senator Watson has reminded the Senate that the tariff is a political and partisan question. Every speech by Democrats and pseudo-Republicans proves the truth of his statement. The Republican party is responsible for tariff legislation. It is not receiving any help from insurgents or Democrats. Senator Borah should be cooperating with Republicans, including President Hoover, instead of trying to sabotage the tariff bill.

BLOODY POLITICS IN MEXICO.

The outbreak of political feuds in Mexico presages another bloody campaign in that country. President Portes Gil's repeated pleas for a government of institutions and laws rather than of men evidently go unheeded. The presidential campaign thus far indicates that violence will play a considerable part in the election.

Until the riot last Friday night in which four supporters of Lr. Vasconcelos were killed the campaign had been free from bloodshed. President Portes Gil was put in the position of defending the party which had viciously attacked his government, but he promised to investigate the incident thoroughly and to proceed against the guilty. His prompt action gave hope that the remainder of the campaign would be conducted along peaceful lines, but now comes from Jalapa, capital of Vera Cruz, a report that many persons were killed and wounded in fighting at the polls last Sunday, when the municipal elections were held.

One strong hope for a peaceful election in Mexico this year was based on the fact that neither of the candidates is a military man. Ortiz Rubio is an educated man, a former governor of Michoacan, an ambassador to Brazil and former minister of communications. His opponent, Dr. Vasconcelos, was minister of education in the Obregon cabinet of 1923. Nevertheless they are engaged in a desperate struggle for the presidency, and in Mexican politics a relatively small spark is sufficient to set off an explosion. If President Portes Gil can remain impartial and exert sufficient strength to insure a bloodless election he will deserve congratulations indeed.

FOG-FIGHTING AIR DEVICES.

The greatest enemy of aviation is fog. The master of a surface vessel, when he runs into thick weather, can heave his vessel to, but an airplane can not be halted, and it can be circled about only for a limited time. Recognizing the fact that aviation can not be made safe until some way has been found to make possible the operation and landing of an airplane in dense fog, the Guggenheim Fund a year ago established a fog-flying laboratory under the direction of Lieut. James Doolittle. This week Lieut. Doolittle took his experimental plane aloft under conditions representing heavy fog, flew it for 15 miles, and made a safe landing without having once glimpsed the horizon or the terrain.

The principal factors that made possible the Doolittle flight were a new application of the visual radio beacon, the development of a new instrument for indicating the longitudinal and lateral position of the plane in flight, a new directional gyroscope, and a sensitive barometric altimeter so delicate as to measure its height above ground within a few feet. In place of the natural horizon Lieut. Doolittle used an artificial horizon to insure stability in flight, and he slid in, as it were, to his landing spot along the beam of a directional radio. The feat was accomplished by the aid of but three instruments that are not already standard equipment on all cross-country planes, the cost of installing which will not be burdensome.

The fog-flying technique as worked out by Lieut. Doolittle is not applicable to flying over unfamiliar territory, as the pilot must know what obstructions are to be avoided in approaching a field. Radio telephone seems destined to play a part in solving that problem, by providing means for bringing planes to a field one at a time in order to avoid collisions and informing pilots of obstructions to be avoided. It is also possible that the echo-type altimeters now being developed will be so sensitive as to warn pilots of obstructions and even of the proximity of other planes. The practical application of the Doolittle fog-flying scheme remains to be worked out, but with the principle well developed it can be said that aviation has taken a great step forward in the direction of safety.

NO MONOPOLIES.

Speaking before the convention of the National Chain Store Association in Chicago several days ago, Col. William J. Donovan, former Assistant Attorney General, warned chain-store operators to be sure they have "assimilated their methods to the economic policies of the Government." "Consolidations and mergers," he said, "must conform to the Sherman law. The courts have pointed out that the mere fact of a consolidation does not violate the law, but rather it is the use to which the power coming from the company is employed." Col. Donovan said further that an industry was justified only by its service to the public and that the real object of the Government is not to interfere with business, but to stabilize and equalize conditions and to assure the people that industry is playing the game according to accepted rules of social justice.

The statement is interesting in connection with the agitation for repeal or modification of the antitrust law. Recent mergers and consolidations are of such a character as would have created a furore of protest a decade ago. Some persons feel that such consolidations and mergers are unlawful and should be dissolved. Others hold that the Sherman law is a dead letter. Among these is Samuel Untermyer, who voiced his sentiments in a radio address last week.

"The courts, Congress and the executive departments of the Government," he said, "have participated with equal effectiveness in the blows that were struck at the antitrust laws until they have been reduced to their present pitiable plight, from which they can never hope to be rescued." Mr. Untermyer, however, does not suggest that it would be wise to attempt to put new life into the laws. The best way to curb improper practices of big business, he said, would be to give the Federal Trade Commission the broadest powers over business combinations, and to require them to obtain a license from the commission before engaging in foreign or interstate commerce.

If the antitrust laws were repealed or modified some other form of restraint and control would have to be provided to prevent monopolies. Probably such restraint would be along the lines indicated by Mr. Untermyer. Would such regulation be held preferable by business to the indirect restraint of the present anti-trust laws which, as Col. Donovan pointed out, do not stand in the way of consolidations or interfere with business, but which tend to create stability and equalization and which assure the people that business is playing the game according to the rules of social justice? The fact is often overlooked by those who agitate for the repeal or modification of the Sherman law that some form of control would have to be substituted in its place. Mere regulatory power in the hands of a commission would hardly be a satisfactory substitute for a penal law enforceable by the courts.

DORAN'S OPTIMISTIC REPORT.

Commissioner Doran's address at the national convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union must have been music to the ears of the delegates. But many an observant American will ask whether the commissioner's optimism flowed out of the fullness of his heart, or whether his remarks were specially designed for W. C. T. U. consumption. At any rate, it was the rosy side of prohibition that he presented.

The gist of the whole address was that "our national prohibition policy is sound and will be maintained." Mr. Doran took the attitude that the constructive accomplishments of prohibition have never been adequately told to the people, and he proceeded to relate some of them. He began with the assertion that the progress made during the last ten years "is the marvel of informed people throughout the world." From this he advanced to statements that "the gross quantity of liquor being smuggled into the United States is less than one-sixth of what it was five years ago;" that "the Federal effort has driven the large, commercial illicit liquor dealers through successive steps to a more and more difficult and ever decreasing supply;" that "only about 10 per cent of the present illicit supply of liquor is derived in any way, shape or manner from industrial alcohol." Perfection has not been obtained yet, it was admitted, but the good accomplished has far outweighed any minor human errors and mistakes.

This version of present conditions is not in complete harmony with what is being said of prohibition on Capitol Hill. Commissioner Doran himself was less optimistic a few months ago when he told Congress that an appropriation of $300,000,000 would be required to dry up the country. And in view of the fact that President Hoover considers law enforcement the most serious problem confronting his administration, it can hardly be said that Mr. Doran's optimism is shared at the White House.

So many claims, favorable and unfavorable to prohibition, are advanced that it is difficult to separate the truth from unfounded propaganda. Despite the achievements proclaimed by the Prohibition Bureau, present conditions are far from satisfactory to a large majority of the people.

A TALK WITH CLEMENCEAU

By JUAN DE SOIZA REILLY,
Translated for the Living Age.

I was praising Clemenceau for his combativeness. I reminded him of his activity in behalf of Dreyfus and of his disputes with Jaures. (Jaures believed in collective action by means of socialistic organization; Clemenceau believed that no action was possible without some change in the individual —"An individual can become a god but a crowd is always a herd of cattle.")

"How do you manage to keep yourself in such a bad humor in political life?" I asked him.

He was pleased at the question.

"Candidly," he said, "it is by remembering what my father suffered. When I am in a dispute, whenever I feel my faith in republican ideas and democratic principles weakening, I think of him. That memory is enough. I am immediately changed. I become someone else. I become he.

"My father, Benjamin Clemenceau, was a doctor, as I was much later. One fine day he became so deeply affected by all the human suffering he saw that sadness overcame him. He shut up his office in Mouilleron-en-Pareds and went off to Nantes with my mother and all their children. He planned to dedicate himself to farming, and to the cultivation of republican ideas. You can imagine the situation of a republican in the imperialistic France of 1854, under that little Napoleon III who had just dissolved the Assembly, crowned himself emperor, and was deporting to Argelia all those who did not agree with his ideas, which meant all those who refused to grovel at his feet.

"In Plancon's bookshop in Nantes a little group of intellectuals used to meet and talk together. Among them was my father. One night the police came and arrested him simply because, in private conversation, he had maintained that a republican democracy was the only hope for France. They decided to deport him to Africa. The day that they took him away to Marseille, standing between two murderers in the prison van, I went with my mother to say good-by to him. I was 13 or 14. I saw my mother crying. I saw father, behind the bars of the van, chained and handcuffed, condemned without trial. None of his intimate friends was there. They had all been afraid to come to say good-by and had hidden instead. Cowards! From that moment, I knew the difference between true friendship and false. Friendship can be golden, but no wonder it is so difficult to find. From that day forward I began to growl, and I kept on growling. When the van was about to leave, I came up close to the bars. I said to my father: 'I will avenge you!'

"My father, who was a painter and poet, as well as a great man, was deeply affected, and kissed the hands that I stretched out to him through the bars. Then he said sternly:

"'If you want to avenge me, study hard, and work!'

"I studied. I worked to avenge him. I am 88 years old. I hope to have twelve more years in which to defend my father's faith."

Awful!

A CHAMPIONSHIP DIVIDED.

Secretary Adams, of the Navy Department, a seafaring man and a sailor of note, has found a happy solution for what seemed to be a grave problem—namely, to determine whether the United states Navy has one champion or two or none among battleships and, if so, which. He has decided that the Maryland and the New Mexico are both champions when they are going separate ways, but that when they are together they shall alternate in flying the pennant emblematic of supremacy On the odd days of the month the honor goes to the New Mexico, on the even days it goes to the Maryland.

In the annual efficiency tests for gunnery, engineering and communications the two made exactly the same score, according to the New York Sun. Here was a situation made to order for sea lawyers. On the one hand it could be argued there was no champion because no vessel had proved itself superior to all the rest. If two tied for first place it could be said with equal force that they had tied for second place. The Navy might well be distressed to contemplate what would happen in case groups met on shore and started to argue the matter out. As there was no precedent Secretary Adams made one by the present arrangement for a division of the honor.

JUST FOLKS

AN OUTSIDER LOOKS AT BUSINESS.

Business is a game,
A game of give and take;
Above a store a name,
Within the name at stake.

One comes the goods to buy,
One comes his goods to sell,
Both honestly must try
To close the bargain well.

Today the goods are sold,
But more days wait beyond.
The spoken word must hold
As stoutly as the bond.

Prices reduced may gain
New patrons for a store,
But steadfast must remain
That name above the door.

Business is a game
And profits are the prize,
But in the player's fame
Success or failure lies.

Men analyze the sales—
Cold records on a slip,
But many a business fails
For lack of sportsmanship.

Forbidding People to Confess a Lie Won't Lessen the Evil of Lying.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THE divorce evil is incorrectly named. The evil is not in the divorce, but in the marriage that preceded it.

If 10,000 physicians quit practicing because they are incompetent is their retirement an evil?

Efforts to correct a mistake call attention to it, but the evil is in the mistake—not in the efforts to correct it.

The statistician's report of 1,000,000 American homes "broken up" does not mean that 1,000,000 couples, once mated in spirit and bound together by that sublime unselfishness called love, have been parted by the sinister influence of immoral laws that encourage evil by making it convenient.

It means that almost 1,000,000 couples married unwisely.

Among these millions of divorced ones are many thousands who married while drunk, many thousands who married in search of a thrill, many thousands who married to "settle down."

And the alimony paid by thousands of cheated men affords proof that thousands of so-called marriages were no more than traffic in sex—a trap, with sex as the lure, to victimize a gullible male and harness him, with the law's connivance, to provide an easy income.

These thousands had no right to marry. They were married only in form, like play actors on stage. The ceremony that "united" them served only to give society's approval to the oldest of sins.

Marriage is something more than legal formality or a ceremony conducted by a clergyman. Law and church do no more than recognize and give sanction to a union that would be sacred on a desert island without law or church.

Marriage is a life partnership of mates who are essential to one another—who are so bound together by affection that life would be intolerable if they were separated.

To marry without that affection is to make a mockery of marriage —to make an arrangement that is nothing more than legalized fornication—and the quicker the arrangement is terminated the better.

There are tragic divorces. Mates separate in perverse anger when their aching hearts are bursting with hunger for one another. But these tragedies are relatively few.

The majority of divorces confess mock marriages.

To end the "divorce evil" end the evil of foolish and immoral matrimony.

To protect our young people from easy divorce protect them from easy marriage.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

SUCCESS!

Well, I've done it. I've arrived. I have scaled the heights. Honor and distinction are mine. Folks always said they didn't think I would amount to much. Even my best friends doubted that I would ever make good. But now I have shown them.

* * * *

Everybody's talking about it. The newspapers have had it. I am conscious of being pointed to and whispered about. People speak to me who have never noticed me before. Strangers shake my hand. I am asked to give autographs. I am no longer a wallflower. Even my wife seems to hold me in respect.

* * * *

Kodak fiends swarm about my house. A man I once poked in the nose has forgiven me and asked me to have a cigar. Things are better at the office. The boss has offered me the use of his car and proposed shortening my hours, if any. The office boy now keeps my gluepot filled without threatening letters.

* * * *

I have received many offers to indorse things like underwear, arch supporters, plug tobacco, hair oils, mattresses, linoleums, roof paint and red cabbage. I am even getting fan mail!

* * * *

I have any number of letters proposing marriage, and today came one from a very wealthy woman saying she is sure I am her long lost son. Verily I have made the grade and attained the pinnacle of success. No matter what may come in the future, I have attained the goal so eagerly sought by millions. Life is sweet. It's a grand and glorious feeling.

I HAVE MADE A HOLE IN ONE!

(Editor's note: The big egg should be ashamed of himself. Investigation reveals that he did make a hole in one playing the Racebrook course in Orange, Conn., driving a ball with a mashie across a lake and into the cup. On the very next hole, however, a par four, he got a ten, and some say eleven. To show him up in an even more discreditable light as a golfer, he put his first drive from this tee directly into the pond, which he had so successfully escaped in making the eagle.)

* * * *

(Columnist's note: Somebody would have to bring that up. Eminent psychologists say that after making a hole in one a man should not be held responsible for anything he does for the next 48 hours. Our recollection is that on the par four hole we got a 12. But what of it?)

How Liquor Treaties Operate to Admit Booze-Carrying Ships—They Exempt Ships From Law's Penalties, While Eighteenth Amendment Provides No Penalties, See?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some of your correspondents seem to be under a misapprehension as to the relation of the liquor treaties to the eighteenth amendment. The amendment forbids the transportation of liquor within the United States, but imposes no penalty for such transportation. Penalties are imposed by various Federal and State statutes. Under the Constitution there are two Federal legislative bodies. One is composed of the President and Congress, and makes law by the enactment of statutes. The other is composed of the President and two-thirds of the Senate, and makes law by the adoption of treaties. Legislation by either body must conform to the Constitution, but the legislative powers of the President and two-thirds of the Senate are wider than those of the President and Congress. Action by either body supersedes previous action by the other. The liquor treaties do not purport to attempt the impossible by legalizing the transportation of liquor in foreign ships. They purport simply to exempt such ships, under certain conditions, from the penalties imposed by statute. Questions have been raised as to the validity of these treaties, but until some Federal or State executive is induced to raise the question as to the validity of the exemption, no judicial determination of the question is possible.

Why Reduce Taxes When There Is So Much to Be Done?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With the advent of a new President in the White House the bugaboo of reduced taxes is looming on the horizon again. Why reduce taxes? Why continue injustice? Without money to spend for justifiable taxes there is no progress. Why cause numerous groups of people to suffer because of the saving of a few pennies to each individual taxpayer? Let all share in the prosperity of the Nation. The Army, Navy, Marine Corps, civil service employes are all entitled to pay revision and a just wage. Is the prosperity of the Nation only for a few at the cost of the rest? There are many things that call for expenditure of the public funds. A new canal across Nicaragua, flood control, Federal highways, the Federal building program and numerous other items. Takoma Park Needs Policemen, Not Scented Sheiks, Says Mr. Hedges.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your correspondent has hit the nail on the head in regard to the police department of Takoma. It is about time that they took this department out of burlesque. We were somewhat startled a while ago to learn through The Post that this department was going to shoot on sight every dog in town that was unmuzzled or unlicensed, whereupon every cur dog in the community seemed to appear on the streets in open defiance of this edict.

The town needs several patrolmen, night and day, who will cover the territory thoroughly. The super-scented sheik on a motorcycle should return to the corset department.

Gossip Is Rife Over Possible Dinner Guests

List of Those to Attend President's Party for Premier Awaited.

By JEAN ELIOT.

In this period of watchful waiting for the arrival of the British premier, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, speculation is rife as to just who will be invited to the President and Mrs. Hoover's dinner for "Mr. MacDonald and party"—to quote the official program. In the Coolidge administration one could have named over the guests for a dinner in honor of any foreign dignitary without going far astray, as they were invited pretty much by formula. But no one can tell quite what the President and Mrs. Hoover will do, whether they will entertain a strictly official company as their predecessors used on similar occasions, or whether they will branch out and invite a considerable group of "outsiders."

In accordance with the Coolidge formula, the dinner company would include the Vice President, the Chief Justice—always invited but sometimes excused from attending as he seldom goes out at night—the Speaker of the House, and the members of the Cabinet, all with their ladies. Then, there would be included the ambassador or minister of the country from which the visitor hailed, with occasionally the diplomatic representative of some closely allied country; a group of State Department officials, members of the suite of the foreign prince or potentate, any Americans who were traveling with the party, all with their wives—if any—and the President's military and naval aids.

The question of seating all these dignitaries may be simplified by the absence of the Speaker and Mrs. Longworth and the Vice President's sister, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann. But, if Mrs. Gann does not come home in time for the festivities, she has exercised a woman's privilege and changed her mind. Dispatches from Topeka notwithstanding, she stated emphatically before she went away that she would return on the very day of Mr. MacDonald's arrival. Mrs. Longworth, au contraire, said that she would not be back.

The "big three" of the entertainments planned for Mr. MacDonald are the White House dinner on October 7, the dinner which the British Ambassador and Lady Isabella Howard are giving on October 8, which will be followed by a reception, and the Secretary of State's dinner on October 9.

Everybody seems to have been taking it for granted that it would be the Secretary of State and Mrs. Stimson who would entertain and that Miss Ishbel MacDonald would be involved with her father in this hospitality. But it develops that this is to be a man's dinner. This is sufficiently a departure from routine, when the distinguished visitor to be entertained has ladies in his party, to cause some comment. But apparently the reason isn't pique with the ladies because they involved him in a controversy over precedence. It is rather that Secretary Stimson wishes to extend his guest list beyond the usual group of "high ranking officials"—inviting presumably senators, representatives and, perhaps naval experts—and to launch an informal round-table discussion in which he thinks the ladies would not be interested.

President Hoover To Entertain Today.

President Hoover will entertain at luncheon today for Vice Admiral Nomura, commander of the Japanese training squadron, which is now anchored off Baltimore, and several of the high ranking officers of the little fleet who have accompanied him to Washington. This evening the Japanese Ambassador, Mr. Katsuji Debuchi, is to give a dinner at the Carlton Hotel for Admiral Nomura, to which the Secretary of the Navy and other distinguished American officials have been invited, and last evening the visiting naval officers dined informally at the embassy, where Admiral Nomura is staying.

President Hoover had as his dinner guests at the White House last night Secretary of Interior Wilbur, Prof. Wesley C. Mitchell, of New York, Columbia University; Prof. Charles E. Merriam, of Chicago, University of Chicago; Prof. William F. Ogburn, of Chicago, University of Chicago; Prof. Howard M. Odum, of Chapel Hill, N. C., University of North Carolina; Mr. Shelby M. Harrison, of New York, vice general director of the Russell Sage Foundation, and Mr. French Strother, a member of the President's secretriat.

Mme. Wu, wife of the Minister of China, who has returned to the legation after spending the summer in China, brought with her three winsome daughters and a small son, Kai Sin, who is 7½ years old. The girls, who range from 14 to 18, and who expect to enter school in Washington, are Yim Chong, Lai King and Lai Yue. They already have a working knowledge of English, having attended an English school in China for a year. Mme. Wu's four younger children—there are eight in the family—are remaining in China for the present.

Senora Dies de Medina, wife of the Minister of Bolivia, has gone to Baltimore to remain several days.

Four Talks During Winter to Stress Historical Basis of Plays.

Under the auspices of the George Washington Memorial Association, Dr. Louis Anspacher will give a course of four lectures at the Willard Hotel this winter, the dates being February 12, 19, 26, and March 5. His subject will be Shakespeare's dramas and their historical background. Mrs. George C. Thorpe is chairman of the committee in charge of the lectures and Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie is secretary. Others on the committee are Mrs. Charles J. Bell, Mrs. Henry F. Dimock, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mrs. Brewster Marwick, Mrs. Samuel Jordan Graham, Mrs. Henry Winfield Watson, Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, Mrs. Charles M. Oman and Miss Vera Bloom.

These lectures of Dr. Anspacher's have become as much a Washington institution as Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's "Musical Morninga." He has given them each season—always for the George Washington Memorial—over a period of several years, and has a most enthusiastic following. One year his subject was "Women Through the Ages," and a lecture on "The Women of the Bible," which was featured, became a burning issue for the proverbial nine days. Some of Dr. Anspacher's hearers thought it was tremendously vital and stimulating, while others contended that he dealt much too flippantly with the Scriptures. Happily, a controversy is always good advertising—and thereafter Dr. Anspacher's audiences were "bigger and better than ever."

Mr. and Mrs. R. Borden Reams will leave Washington today for Philadelphia, where they will spend a few weeks. They will sail October 18 on the Ile de France for Le Havre, where Mr. Reams has been appointed vice consul.

Representative and Mrs. John C. Schafer, of Wisconsin, have opened their home at 800 North Carolina avenue. Mr. Schafer left on Tuesday for Louisville, where he spoke at the national convention of the American War Mothers at the sessions yesterday morning, and yesterday evening. Representative and Mrs. Schafer have had as their guest for the last week Mr. Frank Czapiewski, Wisconsin aviator.

Mrs. Henry S. Boutell has returned to her apartment at Wakefield Hall. She spent the summer at Newport where her son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Malcolm K. Smith, have had a cottage for the last two years.

Mrs. William McKee Dunn, of Gramercy Farm, Hot Springs, Va., has brought two of her little daughters, Mildred and Hildreth Dunn, to Washington for the school season, and is with them at the Mayflower.

Lieut. and Mrs. Strauss Buy Barker Estate.

Lieut. and Mrs. Elliott Strauss, who have been at Green End Cottage, at Newport, for the last two seasons, have purchased the Alden P. Parker estate and propose to build there before next summer. Mrs. Strauss was formerly Miss Lydia Archbold and is the daughter of Mrs. Anne Archbold, of Washington.

Mrs. Charles W. Waterman, wife of Senator Waterman, of Colorado, is spending the early fall season at the Homestead in Hot Springs, Va.

Mr. Thomas E. Campbell, former governor of Arizona, and Mrs. Campbell are at present in New York, whence they will sail shortly for Spain. Gov. Campbell is U. S. Commissioner General to the Seville Exposition and he and Mrs. Campbell spent the early part of the summer in Seville. Tonight Gov. and Mrs. Campbell will be guests at dinner of Mr. and Mrs. John Laimbeer and Miss Helen Laimbeer, who will entertain at their home in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips have been guests at the Mayflower for several days and returned yesterday to their summer home in western Pennsylvania. They will open their house at 1600 Twenty-first street the first of October.

Mr. and Mrs. George T. Marye have reopened their house in N street after having spent the summer in Burlingame, Calif. Miss L"lian Connors, of Burlingame, is their guest.

Mrs. Grace Bryan Hargrave, daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan, has arrived in Washington for a prolonged stay and is at the La Fayette Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, who are in their summer home, at Mount Kisco, will return to Washington the first of next week.

Miss Julia Teresa Sheridan, Mrs. Margaret Sheridan O'Connell and Miss Annette Sheridan, who have been at Willow Hall, their summer place at Cazenovia, N. Y., will return to town on October 1 and will open their house in Twenty-first street for the winter.

Knobel Tells Beauties of Greek Isles

Former French Secretary Here Writes Glowing Letters to Friends.

M. Frederic Knobel, some time second secretary of the French Embassy, who left Washington just a year ago for a post at the French Legation in Athens, Greece, has been writing to friends here most enthusiastically about the beauties of Greece and the many interests of her capital.

In a recent letter he tells of sailing on the Mediterranean, a favorite pastime of the summer, and describes trips to the various islands adjacent to the mainland, one to Samos, where fine wines are made, another to Santorni, to view the famous volcano, and still another to Delos, where French archeologists have recently made excavations. M. Knobel expects to go to Paris this fall and will probably pass the winter there, returning to Greece in the spring.

Mrs. Joseph E. Washington, chairman of the Robert E. Lee Foundation, announces December 2 as the date for the benefit ball at the Willard Hotel. The aim of the foundation is to purchase and restore Stratford, the birth-

WAR MOTHER URGES LAWS' OBSERVANCE

Plans for League to Teach Children Are Offered at Louisville Meeting.

WOULD PRESENT BADGES

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Plans for a "keep law league," designed to teach law observance "from the mother's knee," were submitted to the annual convention of American War Mothers here today by Mrs. Mary Bennett Little, of Wadesboro, N. C., chairman of the organization's committee on prisons.

Mrs. Little's plans include the organization of chapters in every school throughout the country, the giving of badges and the awarding of grade cards for law observance, including laws of the school, home, State and Nation. She described her plan as the first organized response to President Hoover's plea for law observance. She asked the War Mothers to adopt the league as a national program.

The War Mothers were busy today clearing up reports so as to keep tomorrow free for the election of officers. Reports of 26 State presidents were heard, after which delegates attended a luncheon in honor of the gold-star mothers.

The afternoon program was devoted to the dedication of markers and trees and other patriotic ceremonies.

Tonight's speakers included Mrs. Lowell Hobart, presdient general of the national society, Daughters of American Revolution, Washington; Mrs. Boyce Picklin, jr., Indianapolis, president of the American Legion Auxiliary; Mrs. Katherine Langley, Kentucky's member of Congress; Gen. Amos A. Fries, Washington, and Representative John C. Schafer, Washington.

The California and North Carolina delegations today presented to Mrs. Mary Spence, Milwaukee, national president, flowers and other tokens of esteem.

eration of the specific requirements of the locality for which they are to be used, it is believed the cost of maintaining meters in service would be substantially lower than at present, leaving more funds available for other uses, such as extending the meterization of the city.

In his study, Capt. Oram is giving particular attention to the cost of meter repairs and the causes which make such repairs necessary. During the fiscal year ended June 30, the cost of repairing District-owned meters, as distinguished from privately owned meters, which are installed and maintained at the expense of citizens, by all consumers using $25 or more worth of water annually, was in excess of $65,000, while the total cost of new meters installed was less than $10,000, the report of the Water Department states.

Remedies to overcome this excessive repair cost are sought in Capt. Oram's investigation and it is expected that his report will contain numerous recommendations for increasing the efficiency of the Water Department and decreasing its operating expenses.

In 1917 Toller came into prominence as one of the leaders in the German youth movement, and was a vital force in the revolution that ended the war. He had spent thirteen months in the trenches.

Invalidated out of the army in 1917, he matriculated at Heidelberg, and for his social revolt was expelled on 24-hours' notice.

William Allen White, just before the Munich coup of March, 1919, called Toller and his confreres "the hope of future Germany."

IN THE PLAY HOUSE

By JOHN J. DALY

Coincidental with the booking of "The Connecticut Yankee" into the National next week comes word that the old home of Samuel Clemens, up Farmington avenue way, in Hartford, Conn., will be purchased by friends and converted into a Mark Twain memorial. 'Twas there, in a house whose kitchen faces the street, the front door looking down an alley, that the American humorist wrote his later works, one of them being the basis for the musical comedy scheduled here. One day Mark Twain wandered over and sat on the back porch of his neighbor—Charles Dudley Warner. They got to talking. In a little while there was a great hullabalioo, and firemen arrived to put out a blaze in the Warner home. "I didn't know the house was on fire," said Warner, excusing himself. "That's what I came over to tell you," said Twain, walking away, "but I forgot."

Stoddard Taylor, manager of the Belasco, is rather het up over the fact that his house boasts the premiere of a play, "Her Friend the King," with William Faversham in the star role. The play opens next Monday night. For many years—and Stoddard Taylor has been active in the theater more than a quarter of a century—these two fellows, actor and manager, have been friends. Was a time when Faversham thought it a big year that did not play Washington. Of late, bookings having been what they were, he has been through here only a small number of times. His last appearance, a great one it was, happened at the National when he played the title role in that old thriller of another day, "Jim the Penman." Before that he had played with the all-star cast in "Diplomacy." Now he is doing what he has wanted to do for some time, take the lead in a play that comes under the classification, light drawing-room comedy.

Some fifteen or twenty years ago—maybe longer—when the Old Academy of Music was flourishing down at the corner of Ninth and D streets, lovers of melodrama got permanent waves for the mere price of admission. 'Twas a mean, low opus in that house that couldn't stand hair on its ends, and curl it, too! Nowadays, when melodrama is produced it comes to the so-called hotsy-totsy houses, and makes no apology for its appearance. In fact, melodrama has come into its own. At Poli's next week Washingtonians will have an opportunity to see one fresh off the griddle. It is called "The Ghost Train." Hadley Waters, who wrote this work, has had quite some success with a play now doing Hollywood, "Little Orchid Annie," and is a personal believer in the art of melodramatics. He feels that this is just about what theatergoers want. In a letter to T. D. Bonneville, manager of Poli's, Hadley Waters states: "Melodrama is the spice of life. Not only is melodrama everyday life; seasoned with a dash of paprika to make it more digestible, but melodrama is to the jaded what adrenalin is to the heart." Analyzed, that probably tells the secret.

Graham Nichol, the big ace and king, queen and jackspot man at the National Press Club, has been duly memorialized by George S. Kaufmann, coauthor with Ring Lardner, of "June Moon," the new play at the Belasco. It seems that in his "Confessions of Old Washington Newspaperdom," edited by Andy Kelley, Mr. Kaufmann gives credit to Mr Nichol for certain accomplishments learned in the higher realms of mathematics, information that has stood the pupil well in later-day sessions at the Thanatopsis-Inside-Straight Club of New York. There is a poker game staged in "Blackbirds," the musical comedy at the National, but from all accounts this is mere child's play to what went on in the old Press Club, when Mr. Nichol put the boys through their paces. An ace in the hole? Say. There had to be at least five of 'em!

118 GIRLS ENROLLED AT ARLINGTON HALL

College Opens Third Year as President Reviews the School's Growth.

ODE DECISION IS UPHELD

ARLINGTON COUNTY.
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

With an enrollment of 118 students representing 28 States and one foreign country, Arlington Hall, college for girls, at Glebewood, Arlington County, opened its third year yesterday.

Dr. William E. Martin, president, discussing the progress which the school has made, stated that the enrollment the first year was 44, second year 86, and this year thus far has gone to 118 and within the next ten days will have reached a total of 140 girls.

Coming to Arlington County four years ago, Dr. Martin purchased 100 acres of land in the woods along the Glebe road, between Columbia pike and the Wilson boulevard. He cleared the land, buildings were soon under construction, and more than $500,000 has been expended in creating an exclusive, modern school for girls.

The young people's service league of the St. George's Episcopal Church will give a reception tonight in the Parish Hall to the new rector, the Rev. Henry J. Miller, who was greeted last night by the vestry at a special meeting held in the Parish Hall.

President Robert N. Anderson announced that the October meeting will be held in Clarendon, probably in the Odd Fellows Hall, and will be in the nature of a political forum.

The women's auxiliary to the Arlington Fire Department, at a special meeting last night in the old schoolhouse on Columbia Pike, organized its class in first aid. R. J. Gammage, first aid instructor of the Arlington County Chapter, American Red Cross, addressed the meeting on the value of knowing how to give first aid.

More than twenty women registered as members of the class and it was announced that the class is open to any woman interested in the movement. It is being sponsored by the local Red Cross Chapter.

Classes will be held in the Patrick Henry Schoolhouse each Tuesday, beginning October 1.

The Arlington Rotary Club held its weekly meeting yesterday at the Washington Golf and Country Club, with President Dr. R. N. Sutton presiding.

The Rev. Isaac Steenson, chairman of the International Rotary Service committee, spoke on "Better Understanding of International Relations Toward World Peace." The club completed its plans to go to Leesburg Friday, October 11, to join the Leesburg Club in celebrating the local club's 100th consecutive meetnig with a 100 per cent attendance. Eugene Newson, of North Carolina, president of Rotary International, will address the meeting.

Besides his widow he is survived by three children, Ella, Mary and Sarah McIntosh.

There will be a meeting of the executive committee of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce today at 12 o'clock in the Boulevard Bakery at Clarendon. The meeting has been called to consider plans for the quarterly meeting to be held in the auditorium of the Washington-Lee High School, Wednesday night, October 16.

The Arlington County Monarch Club held its weekly meeting yesterday at the Boulevard Bakery at Clarendon.

George Kenelepe, director of the traffic division of the American Automobile Association, stressed the work being accomplished throughout the county in its educational campaign carried on among the school children. Having such a large membership among the motorists in Arlington County, he expressed the view that it would not be long before the work would be extended into Arlington County.

The resignation of R. Blakley James, secretary of the club was accepted with regrets. He explained that his business would be such in the future that it would be impossible for him to attend all meetings and he felt the secretary should. P. P. Woodbridge was elected temporary secretary.

The club went on record as indorsing the work of the county welfare board and urging the county board of supervisors to continue its financial support.

Gen. Harry L. Gilchrist, of the Chemical Warfare Service, U. S. A., will be the principal speaker at the meeting of Columbia Lodge, No. 285 A. F. and A. M., in the Masonic Temple at Clarendon tomorrow night.

Fun for the Younger Folks—

Washington Post—Stanley-Crandall
Boys' and Girls'
CARNIVAL
At Stanley-Crandall Neighborhood Theaters

GEE WHIZ, Billy, you want to come to this! All the kids at school are goin' because teacher said that the new moving picture they are showing is the kind that we ought to see—something we can learn from. But we're goin' to have a lot of fun, too. They're goin' to give us carnival hats, and things like that, and a lot of novelties will be distributed free. Nobody's goin' to say anything if we laugh too loud, and, oh boy . . . wait 'til you see that picture. It's got lions and tigers and elephants and all kinds of animals in it and shows you just how they live and how the country looks where they come from. It's almost as good as goin' there yourself. The name of the picture is—

"The KING of the KONGO"

And the Carnival Will Take Place Tomorrow at the AVENUE GRAND THEATER and THE COLONY THEATER

The carnival will be repeated at other neighborhood theaters of the Stanley-Crandall chain on the opening day of this new serial picture. Every boy and girl will have a chance to attend this good time party at the theater nearest to their home.

The Washington Post

Has cooperated with the Stanley-Crandall Theaters in providing carnival hats and souvenirs for this event, not only because so many of its carrier boys will be among the young people who will enjoy the fun, but also because of the belief that motion pictures of this type have an educational influence that is worthy of indorsement.

NEW HIGH IS SCORED BY BROKERS' LOANS

Week's Increase of $192,000,000 Ends Total Up to $6,761,000,000.

BOND TRADING EXPANDS

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Investment trust offering demands and continued market activity sent brokers' loans to a total of $6,761,000,000 yesterday, an increase of $192,000,000 above the preceding week. The loans for account of others aggregated $3,860,000,000, an advance of $234,000,000.

The Federal Reserve Board's report showed decreases, however, of $21,000,000 and $23,000,000 respectively in loans for account of out-of-town banks and for own account when compared with the previous week.

Capital Traction Shows Loss.

Continued business loss for the Capital Traction Co. is evidenced in its belated report for July filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission. Net income for that month was $22,567.57, a decrease of $12,623.79 from the month a year ago, and that for the first seven months of 1929, $352,866.07 is $42,877.61 behind that of the corresponding period last year.

Comparisons for the same period also revealed declines for the first seven months this year in the following items: $42,595.49, operating revenues; $32,913.83, operating income; $35,296.40, gross income; $209,450, revenue passengers, and $157,454 in bus and car mileage operated.

The statements of the Washington Railway & Electric Co. and the Potomac Electric Power Co. for August were also submitted to the commission. The former company reported again of $43,653.23 in net income in August and its net income for the eight months, $1,308,954.55, in an advance of $104,372.19 above the first eight months last year.

Net income of Potomac Electric Power Co. for last month was $267,338.60, as compared with $242,693.23 in August, 1928. Income for the first eight months is $2,618,793.17, or $215,514.50 more than the comparative period in 1928.

All Directors Reelected.

All directors of the Bank of Commerce & Savings were reelected yesterday at the annual meeting of the stockholders held at Alexandria, the bank operating under a Virginia charter. John M. Riordon, executive vice president, reported an exceptionally good business year. Election of officers will be held at the next regular meeting of the board.

Directors reelected are Maurice D. Rosenberg, Joseph Sanders, W. A. Bennett, Irvin Owings, John M. Riordon, Joseph H. Milans, Dr. Clarence A. Weaver, Alexander Wolf, Louis Bush, A. Brylawski, J. E. Colliflower, E. T. Chewning, Floyd E. Davis, E. L. Elliott, C. E. Edwards, A. S. Gatley, G. A. Kneesi, Sol Lansburgh, M. A. Leese, Harry E. Mayer, J. F. Maury, Vernon G. Owen and Elie Sheetz.

C. & P. Operating Revenues.

Operating revenues of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., of Baltimore City, for the month of August were $1,139,137, the report of operations made to the Public Service commission shows. Expenses during the month were $915,449, making the net revenue $223,688.

Telephone operating revenues for the first eight months of the year were $8,979,835. Operating expenses during this period amounted to $7,119,043, making net operating revenues $1,860,792. For the twelve months ending August 31 the net telephone revenues were $2,770,795, which is equivalent to 6.44 per cent on the average value of the company's property.

The value of the company's property in the state of Maryland as fixed by the Public Service commission as of December 31, 1924, plus additions since that date, was on August 31, $43,698,106.

Taxes assignable to operations in August were $108,147, which was an increase of $626 over July. For the first eight months of the year taxes amounted to $911,640, an increase of $3,258 over the same period of last year. For the year ending August 31, 1929, taxes amounted to $1,331,454.

Capital expenditures for new plant and equipment added to the telephone company's system in Maryland during the first eight months of the year amounted to $2,737,691.

Retirements during this period were $1,427,578, making net additions $1,310,113. Net additions to plant for the twelve months ended August 31 amounted to $1,934,202.

At the close of business August 31, Maryland was served by 203,849 telephones, an increase of 6,050 since January 1. Telephone users during the month made 22,789,650 local and 1,564,495 toll calls. This was an increase of 5.3 per cent in local and 9.3 per cent in toll calls over the same month last year.

Record of Morris Plan Bank.

A record by the Morris Plan Bank of Washington was revealed yesterday in the current issue of The Bulletin, official publication of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, which, under the heading "A Challenge," states the following:

"Until The Bulletin receives evidence of a better record we will concede that the Morris Plan Bank has established the highest mark of any local bank in educational activities among its personnel. Exclusive of its president it has nineteen employes. One of these lives 30 miles from the city and has graduated from a four-year evening school course. This leaves seventeen potential students. Fourteen of the seventeen attend evening classes at the American Institute of Banking or some other educational institution. Of the seven attending the A. I. B., last year the grades ranged from 91.5 to 99.5. Will the challenge go unchallenged?"

Volume of Bond Sales Shrinks.

Bond sale volume fell off in a dull and receding market on the Washington Stock Exchange yesterday, but the stock turnover showed a slight improvement from the preceding session. Bond transactions totaled $6,000, a $900 recession from the previous day, while stock sales of 211 shares were 26 more than Wednesday's.

Fifty shares of Merchants Transfer & Storage preferred traded at 106, point decline, and 35 of Potomac Electric 5½ preferred at fractional loss from 106. Sales of 50 shares of Columbia Sand & Gravel preferred at 86½, fractional advance; 20 of Federal-American Co. preferred at 100¼, fractional loss; 20 of Mergenthaler Linotype at 103¼, last sale price, and 10 of Capital Traction at 90, point-and-a-half fall, were also recorded.

Freight Is Moved Rapidly.

The railroads of this country continue to move the heavy freight traffic now being handled by them with the greatest rapidity ever attained, the Bureau of Railway Economics announced yesterday.

The average speed of freight trains in July this year, according to reports for the month just filed by the Class I railroads, was 13.4 miles per hour, the highest average ever reached in any July on record and an increase of three-tenths of one mile above that for July last year. This average, however, was the same as that for June this year.

President John R. Larner of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., has returned from a vacation at his summer country place, Annsfield, near Mifflintown, Pa.

The Seven Dials Mystery

A Serial Story By AGATHA CHRISTIE.

THE STORY THUS FAR.

Gerry Wade is found dead in bed at Chimneys, scene of a house party. Seven out of eight alarm clocks placed in his room to awaken him are lined up on a mantel. The guests are told that death resulted from an overdose of sleeping powder. Jimmy Thesiger and Bunny Devereux motor to Gerry's home to tell a sister, Loraine, of Wade's death.

Lady Eileen Brent, known as "Bundle," finds a letter Wade had written to his sister making reference to the Seven Dials. Bundle feels certain that Gerry was murdered. En route to London a man, mysteriously shot, staggers into the road in front of Eileen's car. It proves to be Devereux, who, dying, whispers: "Seven Dials * * * tell * * * Jimmy Thesiger."

At Jimmy's quarters Bundle finds Loraine. The three of them set out to trail the murderer. From Capt. Battle at Scotland Yard Bundle obtains a list of secret societies. That evening, with Bill Eversleigh, she visits the Seven Dials Club. A watchman, Alfred, is recognized as a former footman at Chimneys.

Cabinet Minister George Lomax plans a party. He has received a warning letter from the Seven Dials Society. Bundle gets an invitation. Meantime she hides in the meeting room of the society and sees three men enter, each with a dial mask over his face.

NOW CONTINUE THE STORY.

Both men were in evening dress—but with a difference. One was an elegant, slender young man wearing evening clothes of exquisite cut. The grace with which he moved was foreign rather than English. The other man could be better described as wiry and lean. His clothes fitted him sufficiently well, but no more, and Bundle guessed at his nationality even before she heard his voice.

"I reckon we're the first to arrive at this little meeting."

A full pleasant voice with a slight American drawl and an inflection of Irish behind it.

The elegant young man said in good, but slightly stilted, English:

"I had much difficulty in getting away tonight. These things do not always arrange themselves fortunately. I am not, like No. 4 here, my own master."

Bundle tried to guess at his nationality. Until he spoke she had thought he might be French, but the accent was not a French one. He might possibly, she thought, be an Austrian, or a Hungarian, or even a Russian.

The Proceedings Begin.

The American moved to the other side of the table and Bundle heard a chair being pulled out.

"One o'clock's being a great success," he said. "I congratulate you on taking the risk."

Five o'clock shrugged his shoulders.

"Unless one takes risks——" He left the sentence unfinished.

Again seven taps sounded and Mosgorovsky moved across to the secret door.

She failed to catch anything definite for some moments, since the whole company were out of sight, but presently she heard the bearded Russian's voice upraised.

"Shall we begin proceedings?"

He himself came around the table and took the seat next to the armchair at the top. Sitting thus, he was directly facing Bundle's cupboard. The elegant five o'clock took the place next to him. The third chair that side was out of Bundle's sight, but the American, No. 4, moved into her line of vision for a moment or two before he sat down.

On the near side of the table also only two chairs were visible, and as she watched a hand turned the second—really the middle chair—down. And then with a swift movement one of the newcomers brushed past the cupboard and took the chair opposite Mosgorovsky. Whoever sat there had, of course, their back directly turned to Bundle—and it was at that back that Bundle was staring with a good deal of interest, for it was the back of a singularly beautiful woman very much decollete.

It was she who spoke first. Her voice was musical, foreign—with a deep seductive note in it. She was glancing toward the empty chair at the head of the table.

"So we are not to see No. 7 tonight?" she said. "Tell me, my friends, shall we ever see him?"

"That's darned good," said the American. "Darned good! As for 7 o'clock—I'm beginning to believe there is no such person."

"I should not advise you to think that, my friend," said the Russian pleasantly.

A Tiny Black Mole.

There was a silence—rather an uncomfortable silence, Bundle felt.

She was still staring as though fascinated at the beautiful back in front of her. There was a tiny black mole just below the right shoulderblade that enhanced the whiteness of the skin. Bundle felt that at last the term "beautiful adventuress," so often read, had a real meaning for her. She was quite certain that this woman had a beautiful face—a dark Slavonic face with passionate eyes.

She was recalled from her imaginings by the voice of the Russian, who seemed to act as master of ceremonies.

"Shall we get on with our business? First to our absent comrade! No. 2!"

He made a curious gesture, with his hand toward the turned-down chair next to the woman, which every one present imitated, turning to the chair as they did so.

"I wish No. 2 were with us tonight," he continued. "There are many things to be done. Unsuspected difficulties have arisen."

"Have you any report?" It was the American who spoke.

"As yet—I have nothing from him." There was a pause. "I can not understand it."

"You think it may have—gone astray?"

"That is—a possibility."

"In other words," said 5 o'clock softly, "there is—danger."

He spoke the word delicately—and yet with relish.

The Russian nodded emphatically.

"Yes—there's danger. Too much is getting known about us—about this place. I know of several people who suspect." He added coldly: "They must be silenced."

Bundle felt a little cold shiver pass down her spine. If she were to be found, would she be silenced? She was recalled suddenly to attention by a word.

"So nothing has come to light about Chimneys?"

Mosgorovsky shook his head.

"Nothing."

Suddenly No. 5 leaned forward.

"I agree with Anna; where is our president—No. 7? He who called us into being. Why do we never see him?"

"No. 7," said the Russian, "has his own ways of working."

"So you always say."

"I will say more," said Mosgorovsky. "I pity the man—or woman—who comes up against him."

There was an awkward silence.

"We must get on with our business," said Mosgorovsky quietly. "No. 3, you have the plans of Wyvern Abbey?"

Bundle strained her ears. So far she had neither caught a glimpse of No. 3, nor had she heard his voice. She heard it now and recognized it as unmistakable. Low, pleasant, indistinct—the voice of a well-bred Englishman.

"I've got them here, sir."

Some papers were shoved across the table. Every one bent forward. Presently Mosgorovsky raised his head again.

"And the list of guests?"

"Here."

The Russian read them.

"Sir Stanley Digby. Mr. Terrence O'Rourke. Sir Oswald and Lady Coote. Mr. Bateman. Countess Anna Radzky. Mrs. Macatta. Mr. James Thesiger—" he paused and then asked sharply:

"Who is Mr. James Thesiger?"

The American laughed.

"I guess you needn't worry any about him. The usual complete young ass."

"Herr Eberhard and Mr. Eversleigh. That completes the list."

"Does it?" said Bundle silently. "What about that sweet girl, Lady Eileen Brent?"

"Yes, there seems nothing to worry about there," said Mosgorovsky. He looked across the table. "I suppose there's no doubt whatever about the value of Eberhard's invention?"

Three o'clock made a laconic British reply.

"None whatever."

Worth Millions.

"Commercially it should be worth millions," said the Russian. "And internationally—well, one knows only too well the greed of nations."

Bundle had an idea that behind his mask he was smiling unpleasantly.

"Yes," he went on, "a gold mine."

"Well worth a few lives," said No. 5, cynically, and laughed.

"But you know what inventions are," said the American. "Sometimes these darned things won't work."

"A man like Sir Oswald Coote will have made no mistake," said Mosgorovsky.

"Speaking as an aviator myself," said No. 5, "the thing is perfectly feasible. It has been discussed for years—but it needed the genius of Eberhard to bring it to fruition."

"Well," said Mosgorovsky, "I don't think we need discuss matters any further. You have all seen the plans. I do not think our original scheme can be bettered. By the way, I hear something about a letter of Gerald Wade's that has been found—a letter that mentions this organization. Who found it?"

"Lord Caterham's daughter—Lady Eileen Brent."

"Bauer should have been on to that," said Mosgorovsky. "It was careless of him. Who was the letter written to?"

"His sister, I believe," said No. 3.

"Unfortunate," said Mosgorovsky. "But it can not be helped. The inquest on Ronald Devereaux is tomorrow. I suppose that has been arranged for?"

"Reports as to local lads having been practicing with rifles have been spread everywhere," said the American.

"That should be all right then. I think there is nothing further to be said. I think we must all congratulate our dear 1 o'clock and wish her luck in the part she has to play."

"Hurrah!" cried No. 5. "To Anna!"

All hands flew out in the same gesture which Bundle had noticed before.

"To Anna!"

One o'clock acknowledge the salutation with a typically foreign gesture. Then she rose to her feet and the others followed suit. For the first time Bundle caught a glimpse of No. 3 as he came to put Anna's cloak round her—a tall, heavily built man.

Then the party filed out through the secret door. Mosgorovsky secured it after them. He waited a few moments and then Bundle heard him unbolt the other door and pass through after extinguishing the electric light.

Bundle Released.

It was not until two hours later that a white and anxious Alfred came to release Bundle. She almost fell into his arms and he had to hold her up.

"Nothing," said Bundle. "Just stiff, that's all. Here, let me sit down."

"Oh, Gord, my lady, it's been awful!"

"Nonsense," said Bundle. "It all went off splendidly. Don't get the wind up now it's all over. It might have gone wrong, but thank goodness it didn't."

"Thank goodness, as you say, my lady. I've been in a twitter all the evening. They're a funny crowd, you know."

"A damned funny crowd," said Bundle, vigorously massaging her arms and legs. "As a matter of fact, they're the sort of crowd I always imagined until tonight only existed in books. In this life, Alfred, one never stops learning."

SPECULATORS DEFY BIG LOAN INCREASE

Professionals Push Stocks Upward, Despite Perilous Credit Outlook.

CALL FUNDS 9 PER CENT

New York, Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Operators for the advance felt that they could afford to indulge in a powerful bullish demonstration on the stock market today, with most of the calamity howling rumors which sorely tried traders' nerves yesterday definitely branded as groundless and even absurd. The increase in the Bank of England's rediscount rate was actually received with relief, as Wall street had been expecting it for weeks. Trading was largely professional, however, with the day's turnover barely exceeding 4,000,000 shares, as contrasted to nearly 5,000,000 yesterday.

The credit situation remained definitely adverse, although it did not appear in its gloomiest aspects until after the close of the market, when the weekly Federal Reserve brokerage loan figures disclosed an increase of $192,000,000. This is the largest upturn since early last January, making an addition of more than $800,000,000 to the total of loans in the past six weeks, carrying it to the unprecedented figure of $6,761,000,000.

The week's increase was provided entirely by corporations and individuals, the account for others rising $234,000,000, while both local and out-of-town banks reduced their loans moderately. The Federal Reserve condition statements disclosed little change.

Increase Causes Apprehension.

This increase in loans was regarded apprehensively, not only in view of the tight money conditions, but particularly in view of the intermittently declining markets over the period covered by the figures.

While heavy new financing this week was expected to take up fully as much funds as might be released by stock liquidation, the huge increase in loans was in most circles not even dreamed of. Many traders were inclined to regard it as definitely indicating that stock has been passing from strong to weak hands. The upturn in loans for others was regarded as a possible indication that investment trusts have been selling and putting their funds into the stock market.

Another theory advanced was that the recent upturn in several stocks, notably Standard of New Jersey, may have broken out investment holdings from their strong boxes.

Call Funds 9 Per Cent.

Call money held at 9 per cent all day, and time money was very scarce between 9 and 9¼ per cent. Bankers were inclined to the belief that the higher rate in London will not withdraw sufficient funds from New York to make any essential change in the already tight situation, but that it will tend to keep money high. In some quarters it was felt that the increase in the rate came too late, and that a further increase may be necessary.

There was little in the day's business news to influence the market. Walter Chrysler stated that he considered motor stocks too low, but they continued to sag. Several more favorable August railway earnings reports appeared.

Utilities, chemicals, office equipment and several other industrial stocks were rushed upward violently. Columbian Carbon soared 28 points to another new peak, at 299, and Standard Gas & Electric jumped about 22 points to a new peak, at 222, both closing near their tops. American Water Works jumped 15 points. General Electric rallied 10 points, and American Telephone 7½.

Eastman Kodak, National Cash Register, Underwood, Elliott Fisher, Burroughs Adding Machine, Simmons, United Carbon and Pacific Lighting sold up 5 to more than 10 points, mostly to new high records. General American Tank, Atlantic Gulf & West Indies and Myers Bros. were other issues reaching new high ground. U. S. Steel closed about a point higher. Oils were firm.

Radio Sells Off.

Radio failed to make headway, selling off about 3 points for a time, and closing practically unchanged. Chrysler Motors slipped off a couple of points to a new low below 60, and General Motors sagged. Marmon dropped about 13 points to a new 1929 low at 53.

Anaconda also encountered disappointed selling in response to the unchanged dividend rate, although interests close to the company had been predicting no change at this time. Rails were generally sluggish.

Commodities were irregular, with Grains rallying sharply. Wheat futures sold up about 3 cents a bushel in response to better foreign demand and bearish weather reports. Corn mounted about 1 to 3 cents in response to a better cash demand. Cotton futures lost 60 to 90 cents a bale, as it appeared the tropical hurricane, which sent prices up yesterday, would avoid the belt.

Foreign exchanges firmed up markedly in response to the higher discount rate at London. Sterling cables rose five-sixteenths of a cent to $4.85 7-16, which is well above the incoming gold point. The Canadian dollar moved up to 99¼ cents.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Unfavorable features in the weather news were reflected by considerable buying in the cotton market early today, but advances were checked by continued Southern selling, and prices later eased off. December contracts sold down from 18.79 to 18.58 and closed at that figure, with the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 12 to 18 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 2 to 9 points with the active months selling about 4 to 12 points net higher during the early trading on covering, which was evidently combined with some trade buying and a moderate commission house demand, promoted by reports of further rains in the Eastern belt, the tropical storm situation and relatively steady Liverpool cables.

March sold up to 19.11 on this advance, but there was some liquidation of October which eased the price off right after the opening and which seemed to have a somewhat unsettled effect on the market.

These near month offerings were absorbed by trade buying against sales of later deliveries, and there was a little buying during the middle of the day on the official weather details showing heavy rains in Georgia.

There seemed to be uncertainty as to the further course of the tropical storm which, however, with some traders believing that it might not reach the belt, and the market was easy in the late trading.

Business was not active, but there was very little demand after the early buying had been supplied, apparently, and the market worked off under liquidation, which was coupled with more or less Southern selling. At the lowest October sold at 18.51 and March at 18.87, and the close was at these figures.

The failure of the Eastern belt rain news to have a more stimulating effect on demand was probably a disappointment to recent buyers and may have accounted for some of the afternoon selling.

Liverpool cables said that covering and buying on the rain news in that market had been supplied by realizing and scope selling on the increase in the bank rate. According to these reports from India the demand for cotton cloths was broadening, but the China trade was poor. Exports today, 26,331, making 807,508 so far this season. Port receipts, 58,464. United States port stocks, 1,119,415.

RAIL BONDS DISPLAY BETTER UNDERTONE

Light Trading Due to Scant Attention Received by Convertibles:

FOREIGN LIST IRREGULAR

New York, Sept. 26 (A.P.).—The development of a better undertone in the rail group gave the bond market a steadier appearance today. However, trading was the lightest of the week, and the support given to representative carriers was offset to a degree by the softness of the utilities. Time money was unchanged at 9 per cent.

The small volume was due to the scant attention paid to the convertibles. For only the American Telephone 4½s traded in more than nominal amount. These debentures moved within a 9-point range, closing at 218½, or near the day's top, for a net gain of 5 points. American International 5½s and International Telephone 4½s scored advances of a point each, while American I. G. Chemical 5½s, after dipping to 112, managed to finish at 114, or 1⅞ above the Wednesday close. Reading Coal & Iron 6s, which have been in favor all week, continued their show of strength, moving up 3.

Gains of half a point or more developed in Atchison general 4s, Baltimore & Ohio first 5s, Canadian Pacific 4s, Chespeake & Ohio 4½s, Chicago Great Western 4s, Erie 5s, Missouri Pacific 5s, Nickle Plate 5½s, and Texas & Pacific 5s, while smaller advances in the rail section were numerous.

Selling in the utilities brought out losses in Detroit Edison 5s, Cincinnati Gas & Electric 4s, Federal Light & Traction 5s, New England Telephone 5s, North American Edison 5½s, Utah Light & Traction 5s and New Orleans Public Service 5s, the last named touching the new low of 81 on a decline of 3 points. Liquidation in this section of the list was of minor importance, however.

Industrials made mostly small changes in an irregular market. Chile Copper 5s and United Biscuit 6s moved up about a point. In the specialty division, Pathe 7s, ex-warrants, gained 1⅛ and Shubert Theater 6s lost 1, the former showing some accumulation. These two companies are reported to be nearing a merger agreement.

Foreign bonds and securities of the United States traded irregularly lower, but small turnovers were the rule.

One item in the day's financial news afforded a sidelight on the current condition of the bond market. It was announced that the city of St. Louis received no bids on a $6,000,000 issue of 4½ per cent bonds. The municipality had stipulated that its securities were not to be sold below par. Recent offerings of municipals of similar coupon rates have been marketed at a discount.

Robinson, on Radio, to Give Tariff Talk

Democratic Leader Will Be Heard on WRC at 9. Band to Offer "Evening in Paris" — Interwoven Pair on WJZ at 8.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, will discuss "The Tariff" over a National Broadcasting Co. network, headed by WRC, at 9 o'clock. Senator Robinson is the Democratic leader of the United States Senate, as well as a member of the Senate committees on foreign relations, postoffices and post roads, rules, Territories and insular possessions.

Sascha Fidelman, violinist, will play Tschaikowsky's "Chanson Sans Paroles" as a featured solo in the Cities Service concert which will be broadcast at 7 o'clock from WRC. Rosario Bourdon, conductor, is represented by three transcriptions of favorite songs. The Cavaliers quartet will sing two of these, "The Rosary" and "Believe Me, if All Those Endearing Young Charms." Orchestral numbers will include "Fete Boheme," from "Scenes Pittoresques" (Massenet); "Trees" (Rasbach-Bourdon), selections from "My Maryland," "Fireflies" (Savino), "Three Frivolities" (Fletcher), "Mandolinata" (Paladilhe) and "The Village Dance" (Burleigh).

"An Evening in Paris" presentation will be followed by the Schradertown Brass Band. The band concert will be interrupted by efforts of local citizens to effect an accord between Gus and Louie, the garage partners, who are fighting over the possession of a torn $1,000 check during the broadcast at 8:30 o'clock. Gus and Louie were awarded the $1,000 check jointly following a dispute over the winning of an automobile race at the Schradertown Fair. The check was torn in two in a squabble which followed, each getting half. Friends are attempting to bring the partners together so they may cash the check.

Compositions of the master composers, Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven, distinguish the Slumber Music which Ludwig Laurier and a string ensemble will broadcast at 10:15 o'clock, as follows:

Overture to "The Uninhabited Island" (Haydn), selection from "The Magic Flute" (Mozart), "Larghetto," from "Second Symphony," and "Die Ehre Gottes" (Beethoven) and "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth" (Haydn).

The suite, "Contes De Mai," by Faulin, provides a musical novelty for listeners to the Pacific Little Symphony concert to be broadcast from the San Francisco studios at 3 o'clock. Other selections are the overture to "Mignon" (Thomas), nocturne from "Midsummer Night's Dream" (Mendelssohn), "Armenian Dance" (Horlick), "Carmen Suite No. 2" (Bizet), "March of the Toys" (Herbert), intermezzi Nos 1 and 2 from "Jewels of the Madonna" (Wolf-Ferrari), and "Prelude in G Minor" (Rachmaninoff).

Billy Jones and Ernie Hare, the Interwoven Pair, who were among the first entertainers to turn their talents to radio performances and who have been heard on the air for the last six years, will be heard from the Crystal Studio at Madison Square Garden during the radio world fair between 8 and 8:30 o'clock this evening. WJZ and WLW are included in the coast-to-coast network.

Marie Opfinger, soprano, and Blundon Wills, virtuoso of the marimba xylophone, are the stars to be heard during the presentation of "In the Dream Makers Studio," which will be heard from WMAL at 10:30 o'clock. An additional feature the program will include solos by Ben Alley, tenor; selections by the Columbia Mixed Quartet, and several numbers by the orchestra.

Violin solos, songs and other music typical of Russian peasant life will be heard during the broadcast of "In a Russian Village" at 10 o'clock.

Chopin's "Polonaise Militaire" and the "Berceuse" from "Jocelyn" will be played by Jesse Crawford, "poet of the organ," during his broadcast at 9:30 o'clock. Mrs. Crawford's "The Moonlight Reminds Me of You" will be featured.

"Let's Go Fishin'" the Izaak Walton League program, will be heard at 7 o'clock from WOL, preceded by Kathryn Dunning, pianist, and Pauline Healy Snook, popular songs.

The Gondoliers, a novelty sextet, and the Columbia Trio will be featured from WJSV during the evening, in addition to F. W. Hart and David Martin, barytone. The Bran Hughes Rhythm Boys will be presented at 7:30 o'clock.

WORK'S BRIDGE

Bridge Brevities, a pamphlet by Milton C. Work, the world's pre-eminent authority on Auction and Contract Bridge, free.

This valuable pamphlet, containing concise suggestions for players of both games, will be sent with the compliments of this paper to readers of Mr. Work's articles who request it.

Requests must be addressed to Milton C. Work, care of this paper, and must include a stamped (2c stamp) self-addressed return envelope.

Read Mr. Work's articles on Auction and Contract. Every day exclusively in The Washington Post.

THERE are many "Doubting Thomases" among Contract Bridge players who refuse to believe that hand valuations, or "counts," as they frequently are termed, produce winning results in the long run. They assert that a player with sound judgment can bid his hands effectively by using "card sense" and "just sizing them up."

Of course all experienced Bridge players appreciate that any standard rule of bidding or play should be varied occasionally; but in the general run of hands a player gets the best results by basing his bid upon an approved mathematical appraisal of his hand.

I was much interested in a report received at the end of the past summer season from one of the greatest Bridge analysts I know. He had undertaken during the summer to record the results obtained by expert Contract players who follow their own judgment as against those of other expert players who use an approved count. His conclusion was as follows: "My experience is that with hands as they run, lively and tame, the use of the standard system is worth a minimum of 50 points per hand on the average as compared with the best unassisted judgment of those known to have sound Bridge judgement."

There is no question that Contract requires more accuracy in bidding than Auction; a player may know that with his hand a Spade should be bid at Auction and yet be quite ignorant whether with the same cards at Contract he should start by bidding one, two, three and four Spades. There are many who were able to get along successfully at Auction without employing the conventional bids of that game, who suffer greatly in Contract when they attempt to estimate the value of their hands without having a sound basis on which to depend.

I believe there is more doubt in the minds of Contract players about what to do when partner has started with a No Trump and the opponent on his left has passed, than about any other point of the contracting. For a few days starting tomorrow, each Friday and Saturday article in this Contract series will be devoted to that subject. The conventional requirements for various over-calls of a No Trump will be fully explained.

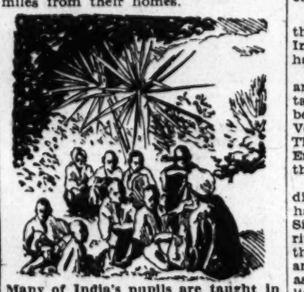
Little Visits in Asia.

THERE are few railroads in India, and the greater part of the people do little traveling. Some of the natives live to middle age without having gone more than twenty miles from their homes.



Many of India's pupils are taught in the open air.

Because so many of the natives remain close to their home, the different parts of the country have failed to develop a common language. A count of the languages in India has shown that there are at least 120 different systems of speech.

About 100,000,000 of the people speak "Hundi." About 50,000,000 speak "Bengali." The remaining languages are divided up among 200,000,000 other persons.

How would you like to have to learn to speak in 120 different ways?

There is no one in India who can do it. An Indian traveler would find himself "like a stranger in a strange land" in many parts of his own country.

Besides the religion of Brahma, there are many other religions in India, including Buddhism and Mohammedanism.

The sacred books of the Hindus are known as the "Vedas." They take the place of the Bible for members of the Hindu religion. In the Vedas are fine beautiful thoughts. These books have been translated into English, and some day you may read them.

The Hindus believe that if they die near the Ganges River, they will have better luck in the next world. Sick persons are often brought to the riverside, so that they may die with their feet in the water. Jars of water are taken from the Ganges to serve as "holy water." There is also a belief that if a person dies within 50 miles of the holy city of Benares, he will find good fortune "across the Styx."

Many persons in India believe that after a person dies his soul will go into another body—perhaps into an animal, perhaps into a baby.

The people of India learned to write thousands of years ago, but education has not become a common thing in the country. Only one person in fifteen in India knows how to read and write.

Dare Interprets the Mode

"Van Dyck," elegant evening coat of emerald green velvet, trimmed with vison fur. (Courtesy of Philippe et Gaston, Paris.)

THE tailleur has held out most firmly for a continuation of the mode as it was but slowly and inevitably it is giving way, and tailored costumes are undergoing the same change as the rest of the mode—adopting the longer skirt, higher waist-line and greater general femininity of design and detail.

Not that it has or will go as far as in other lines. The tailleur and the strictly sports dress have certain limitations, certain conditions they must fulfill, else they would cease to be tailleurs and sports dresses.

But let us describe for you briefly a model or two, all showing the raised waist-line, greater length and increasingly feminine note.

• • • •

Redfern is showing a stunning tailleur. The blouse is of yellow mousseline, with little V collar and simple bow, the skirt is of black crepe de chine, pleated at the sides, and the cunning jacquette, rounded at the bottom in front, is of yellow mousseline printed in big black polka-dots and bordered in the black.

Vionnet displays a smart tailleur in a black and white mixture woolen fabric, cut on simple straight lines, with full skirt. The blouse is of white organdie, with a smart little collar, and the jacquette is set off by a black leather belt and a little bouquet of blue flowers on the left shoulder.

Doeuillet-Doucet shows a chic tailleur of blue and white checkered poplin, with wide blue belt and a blouse of white with blue buttons, which are repeated on the front of the skirt.

Dinner on Our Diet.

Clear soup made with vegetables from list No. 1; lean meat or fish, 1 generous helping; vegetables from list No. 1, as desired; vegetables or fruit from list No. 2, 2 heaping tablespoons; 2 soda biscuits or 1 slice of bread; fruit as for breakfast.

'Member the coolie coat we told you how to make for the summer? Well, a mandarin coat now for winter is every bit as easy to make, but even more elegant and lovely. A mandarin coat can, as you know, be worn SO successfully for either a negligee or evening coat—and NEVER goes out of style. Send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post, for the illustrated leaflet, which tells you very, very simply how to make it.

• • • •

An evening coat tres elegante, dipping in the back as evening coats must in order to belong to an evening dress today! 'Twas of emerald green velvet trimmed with vison and plenty of it. Philippe et Gaston have always been famous for their quiet elegance, which makes no sacrifice to smartness.

Darlings: Can you tune in on Station WOR? I certainly do wish you could, because it would be such fun to know you are listening to me, myself, talking to you for the next few Saturday mornings at 11 o'clock (New York time, you know).

Every Wednesday at 12:05 p. m., La Chic Secretaire reads the Fashion Letter that is sent each WEEK from Mamzell in Paris. Next Saturday, then, for me, Wednesday for L. C. S.

Isn't this a delightful inconsistency? A tucked-in blouse of heavy tulle, and a wool belt at the natural waist-line. The inconsistency has nothing to do with the waistline, if you gather primroses in winter, as it were. All of which doesn't mean a doggone thing!

Being wimmen, we are privileged to change the mind! So I have decided that you DON'T have to typewrite those letters for the "CLEVER FINGERS CONTEST!" After all, hard as it may be for me—you may not have a typewriter. So on with the ideas, untypewritten or whatever.

And then there's the weekly Dare Fashion letter in the Sunday Washington Post. We feel sure you'll enjoy it.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

WHITE SPOTS ON NAILS.

THIS column receives a great many letters about white spots on the nails. It has been the practice to ignore these letters for two reasons. One was that no health question was involved. White spots on the nails are not caused by any disease and they do not indicate any. They are neither of importance themselves nor do they indicate anything of importance.

The other reason was even more to the point. The writer of the column did not know what to answer. He knew no way either to prevent or to remedy the condition. These two reasons were enough.

Dr. E. W. Netherton has relief to offer. In his opinion, white spots occur on finger nails and toe nails because the substance of the nail has not gone on to completion. The nails are composed of skin cells. These cells originate in the root of the nail and are contributed to by the nail bed. They undergo a change called keratinization. If this change is completed normally we have the hard protective structure called the nail, firm in consistency, pinkish in texture, smooth on the surface.

The nail is immature, soft and thin in the root region. As it grows there the ageing portions are gradually pushed forward. At first attached by its under surface it finally is a completed product and, as such, loses all connection with the blood supply of the nail bed. If this process of forming and ageing is interfered with the nail substance is ridged, uneven and incomplete. It may show white spots or white lines.

The most frequent cause of white spots, white lines and perhaps of some kind of ridging is injury to the root of the nail. The injury which surpasses all others, at least on the hands of those who try to take care of the hands, is pushing back the skin of the matrix with a nail stick. Doubtless cutting away the skin is another cause.

It is generally known that the people who have most nail disturbances of this character are those who manicure their nails most frequently. In some cases seen by Dr. Netherton he was able to convince the affected people that they must quit pushing back the skin on the nails. When they stopped traumatizing the nail bed and the nearby skin, and particularly when they quit using the nail stick, they stopped acquiring white spots and white lines.

It is possible that the tissues in this important zone may be injured by washing the hands in strong soap solution, by doing laundry work, and by handling irritating chemicals. But the probability is that the nail stick and the nail scissors do more harm than chemicals.

"LIBRA."

If September 27 is your birthday the best hours for you on this date are from 5 a. m. to 8:30 a. m., from noon to 2 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 8:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 10 a. m. to 11:50 a. m. and from 4 p. m. to 6:30 p. m.

Avoid taking any unnecessary risks or chances on this date! Do not foolishly part with your money. Attractive temptations to touch the pocket will confront you. It will be a period of unfruitful activity.

The child born on this September 27 will be impulsive, emotonal and rather impatient. It will like to get results quickly and will not be willing to "dig" for knowledge or results. It will be both humorous and vivacious.

September 27 people are inclined to take things too much for granted and, because of this character peculiarity, are apt to neglect or slight things of importance. When you reach a certain degree of success or eminence you are of a type that will try to "live upon your reputation" instead of making an effort to maintain your position.

Your failures, if you have any, are due to you being too sure of your job and to you taking your importance too seriously. A wider outlook, a more studied interest, will help you to avoid many mental and physical pitfalls. This advice is especially given to you if you be a man. You unconsciously try the endurance of your associates to the breaking point. You are clever, you have ability and you have originality—but you are not a genius—you can not do anything 100 per cent better than any one else. You must consider yourself a competitor and strive to hold your place. If you make the most of yourself and do not rest on your oars you can attain a large measure of success and you need fear no one.

The nature of your home life, to a large degree, depends upon yourself. You must overcome your natural inclination to demand too much and to give too little. You must hold the affections which you have won.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

Money Troubles.

"Why do you always speak as if money troubles were no troubles at all, when every year homes are broken up, marriages dissolved, even in some cases people taking their own lives over money troubles?"

This reproach from a worried woman, whose husband is out of work, seems, on its face, to be justified, but is it, really? Is it, for instance, the "money trouble" that breaks up a home, dissolves a marriage, causes a human to take his own life? Or is it, in fact, one of those other conditions that we term real trouble? Illness of mind or of body, or of both; some death blow to the spirit, dealt perhaps by some unthinking loved one?

Men have been out of work, and found work, and have lived to forget the bitter days that passed before security returned. Wives have faced lean days and scrimped and counted pennies and lived to buy new curtains for the kitchen and sing as the kettle boiled. These things are as much part of life as prosperity, and teach us to appreciate prosperity, and these things do not break up homes, dissolve marriages nor cause suicides.

There are, however, homes where peace dwells only in prosperous hours, where faith is not one of the family circle. Let the least ill wind blow, and discord rules. Unkind thoughts, unkind words, acts that are unforgettable. In such a home, misfortune in business, loss of work, any temporary embarrassments, invite instant hostility, recrimination, destruction.

What man can step out with confidence to sell himself to a new employer after some bitter altercation in which he has heard himself called a failure, or worse? If we poor little humans could just remember that the things that happen to us either lift us up or drop us down—but never leave us just the same, we might make more effort to meet circumstances without fear; but, instead, we immediately begin to cry loudly, and show how weak and spiritless we are—and circumstances rule us.

Once years ago, in Atlanta, I met a little mother whose two sons worked with their dad in a business that closed its doors. There were four young children and two grandparents to be cared for. Did that mother moan over such bad judgment as all working in the same place? Not she. She really believed in fate, so there was conviction in the way she said that she believed it was fate that forced them to change their employment. She said she just wondered who'd find a job first. And there were wonderful corn cakes every morning for breakfast at 7:30, and even when weeks passed the search continued to be regarded as an "experience," and nothing more. When the first sign of weakening showed itself in the oldest boy, he was given $50 to go to another city, where he broke the spell by finding another job. This encouraged, he wired for his brother. Then dad was sent for by one of the first firms he had seen, after his own firm failed. For that entire family a new life started. They had been in a rut, satisfied with "steady" jobs in a firm that could not afford increases in salary because it was collapsing. Instead of years of labor without hope of reward, all three men found new incentive and a real future.

Suppose the mother had scolded, stormed, or even wept and wailed. Things might have been very different. Instead, she declared that all that mattered was that "no one should lose their head or miss the fun of a real experience."

Money troubles are troubles only when complicated by other ills. Of themselves, they often lead to success that never otherwise would be attained.

Let trouble develop—rather than destroy.

Director of Company Maps Out Program Here Beginning January 6.

German opera is assured for Washington this season.

S. Hurok, managing director of the German Grand Opera Company, was in Washington yesterday to complete arangements with the local manager, T. Arthur Smith, for the presentation of his company in a series of Wagnerian and Mozart operas during the week of January 6.

The German Grand Opera Company will officially open its second American tour in the National Capital at a time when "the season" is at its height. Three operas, announced T. Arthur Smith, are already selected for the repertory here, with a fourth to be the choice of Washington music lovers from the famous "Nibelungen Ring." Wagner's "The Flying Dutchman" will be given on the opening night, January 6, as a novelty here. On Wednesday evening the choice will be between "Die Walkure" and "Gotterdammerung." Friday evening Mozart's "Don Juan" will be sung, and with another interim to make the opera season far more enjoyable, the final opera will be given on Tuesday, January 14, with a matinee performance of the immortal "Tristan and Isolde" as a brilliant finale.

Shrine Circus Ticket Sales Break Records

The Shrine circus, to be held at the Auditorium October 1, 2 and 3, under the auspices of Almas Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, gives promise of more than filling the vast showroom at Nineteenth and E streets. Ticket sales have been enormous—breaking all existing records of like occasions, according to Noble George E. Harris, general circus committee chairman.

From the advance notices of the various acts plenty of the better class animal acts will be shown. The various committees are elated over the early results of the ticket sales. The entire proceeds of the circus will be used to defray the expenses of the uniformed bodies of Almas Temple to the annual Shrine convention at Toronto next year.

SHARKEY KNOCKS OUT LOUGHRAN IN 3D ROUND; GOLF TITLE OF DISTRICT RETAINED BY STEVINSON

-Stroke Lead Compiled by Champion

Roesch and Pitt Tie for Second Place With 304 Cards.

Shorey, Hunter Fail to Keep Pace in Morning Play.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

MILLER B. STEVINSON, of the Columbia Club, yesterday repeated his victory of a year ago by winning the District amateur golf championship in a 72-hole medal play competition on the course of the Congressional Country Club. He had a total card of 149—152—301 for the 72 holes, leading the field by three strokes. There was a tie for second place between Frank K. Roesch, Washington Golf and Country, 157—147—304, and Harry G. Pitt, Manor, 153—151—304, but as Pitt could not play off the tie today, owing to business engagements, the silver medal, runner-up prize, was awarded to Roesch.

This mere recital of figures gives no idea of the kaleidoscopic changes which took place in yesterday's play. When the first 36 holes were concluded on Wednesday afternoon there was a triple tie between Stevinson, John C. Shorey, Bannockburn, and J. Monro Hunter, jr., Indian Spring, each with 149. At the end of the first eighteen holes yesterday morning Shorey had passed into the discard with a disastrous card of 87.

Shorey's Game Fails In Morning Round.

On the first nine Shorey expended 43 strokes, six over par, due mainly to shanking his mashie shots, while Hunter, with a total of 83, had also eliminated himself from the competition. Stevinson, with a fine round of 74, one stroke over par, was still in the lead with a total of 223, but was closely pressed by Pitt, who, with a card of 72, one stroke under par, due to four birdies, was in second place with a total of 225 strokes. Charles W. Cole, jr., Indian Spring, was third with 227, only 4 strokes behind, and Page Hufty, Congressional, was next with 230.

Walter R. McCallum, Washington, followed with 231, and Hunter and Frank K. Roesch, Washington, were tied with 232. It was still a battle in which the devil might take the hindmost, everything depending upon the outcome of the last eighteen holes.

The afternoon round saw the slaughter of the innocents. Cole, out in 39, passed out of the picture when on the second nine, beginning with the eleventh hole, he played out of traps on four consecutive holes. His tee shot on the eleventh was in a trap, his third shot on the twelfth was in a trap and he was out with his fourth; his tee shot on the thirteenth was in a trap, and on the fourteenth his approach landed his ball in the sand.

Shorey, although he had a 78 for the final round, and Hunter, although his total was 76, were too far behind to catch up with the procession. Meanwhile, Roesch, playing the first nine in 37 and the second nine in 35 for a 72, one stroke under par, forged into second place.

When Stevinson and Pitt played the first nine of the final eighteen in 38 each, it was evident that they would have to fight out the battle for the championship.

Both Require Sevens On Tenth Hole.

Curiously enough, both flirted with disaster on the tenth hole. Stevinson, as on the opening day, skied his drive, and after missing his second shot holed out in 7, while Pitt, overapproaching the green on his third, failed to reach the putting surface in four and then took three more shots from off the green, also for a 7.

From that time on to the sixteenth tee they played a gentleman's game, playing the eleventh in 3s, the twelfth in 5s and each taking 3 putts on the thirteenth for a 4, Pitt

NATS PONDER TENNESSEE CAMP

Eynon Investigates Chattanooga Training Facilities.

CHATTANOOGA was injected into the probabilities of a site for the Washington Ball Club's spring training camp yesterday when Secretary Edward B. Enyon, of the Nats, departed for the Tennessee metropolis to investigate the facilities there.

Since the Nats were not invited to return to Tampa by the Chamber of Commerce of that city, it had been expected that the Nats might choose Chattanooga, inasmuch as Joe Engel, Washington scout, was reported as a prospective buyer of the Chatanooga franchise. In this event, Engel and the Nats doubtless would have a strong working agreement in the transfer of players, President Clark Griffith, of the Nats, said last night.

Pitchers and Catchers To Train Apart.

Griffith doubts the wisdom of an extremely early start in spring training and indicated that the Nats may train in a more northerly city than Tampa, at the same time avoiding the cold spell. He said that the Nats' staff of pitchers and catchers doubtless would precede the remainder of the squads in training by about two weeks before joining the main body at camp about March 15.

In order to complete this year's schedule with the Yankees, interrupted by the postponement of today's game out of respect to the death of Miller Huggins, for whom services will be held today, the Nats and the Yankees are to meet in a double-header tomorrow.

Joe Proctor to Meet Wiener in Baltimore

Joe Proctor, Washington heavyweight, has been signed to meet Herman Weiner, of Baltimore, next Thursday night, it was announced last night by Goldie Ahearn, Proctor's manager. The fight will be an eight-round affair and the main bout at the Embassy Theater in Baltimore for that evening.

Weiner was knocked out by Marty Gallagher several months ago.

Mickey Walker Signs To Meet Ace Hudkins

Los Angeles, Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Mickey Walker, middleweight champion of the world today signed a contract to meet Ace Hudkins, Nebraska contender, in a ten-round bout at Wrigley Field here, October 29.

The titleholder will receive 47½ per cent of the total receipts while Hudkins will receive 12½ per cent.

Poor Decision Aids Yanks To Win

5 Runs Follow Disputed Ball as Nats Bow by 10-3.

Hadley Pounded Out; West Stars Afield and at Bat.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

SLASHING the same power in their bats which marked their games when they were winning pennants regularly, the Yankees turned in a 10-to-3 victory over the Nationals yesterday. Only four of their runs were earned, however, and it was a pretty pitching duel between Irving Hadley and Ed Wells until Umpire Campbell took all of the spice out of the game in the alien seventh with a most questionable decision.

Usually a missed ball or strike does not mean much in a game but the one in question made the difference between a scoreless frame and one which netted five runs. With two out, the bases full, and the count 3 and 2 on Ruth, Hadley shot one apparently waist high and right over the groove. Ruth let it go by and it looked as though he had struck out, but Campbell called it a ball. That it was at least mighty close to being a strike is indicated by the fact that Catcher Muddy Ruel protested so strongly that he was banished and for only the second time in his long baseball career.

First Run is Forced Over Plate.

This forced over a run, and two weak hits, an ordinary Texas leaguer near the left field foul line, which gave Gehrig a triple because the outfield was pulled over to the right, and Durst's looper just out of Cronin's reach, brought four more runners home. Coupled with four Washington errors, this decision made the road comparatively easy for the Yankees.

Until the seventh, the Nationals had had the better of the contest, although the string was knotted at the time. Hadley allowed but two scattered hits in the first five frames,

Macks Beat Red Sox, 5-3; Earnshaw Winner

Boston, Sept. 26 (A.P.).—The Athletics opened their final trip to Boston this season with a 5 to 3 victory over the Red Sox here today. The game really was won in the first inning when Al Simmons hit his thirty-second home run with two mates aboard. Additional runs in the fourth and the fifth, however, proved to be the ultimate margin.

George Earnshaw pitched six innings, earning his twenty-third victory of the season, but retired to give Rube Walberg a warm up.

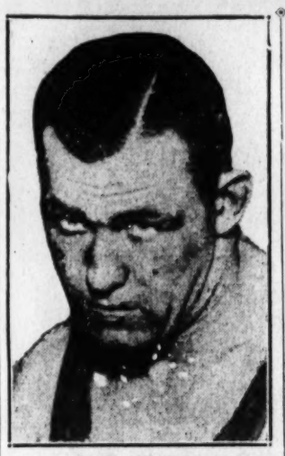
LOUGHRAN HELPLESS, ONE-SIDED BATTLE IS STOPPED BY REFEREE



JACK SHARKEY.

Sharkey Dazes Foe With a Sweeping Right to Jaw.

45,000 See Ex-King of Lightheavies Easily Handled.

By EDWARD J. NEIL
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, Sept. 26 (A.P.).—In a comeback that was swift and stunning, Jack Sharkey, bombastic sailor from Boston, swept back to the top of the heavyweight brigade tonight with a sensational three-round victory over Tommy Loughran.

A crowd of 45,000, drawn to the spacious American League Ball Park by the lure of the fin l heavyweight spectacle of the outdoor season, sat astonished and silent as the temperamental tar, at times the most gifted of the present crop of heavyweights, suddenly turned tiger again and crushed Loughran from the picture in just 27 seconds of the third session.

The crowd that paid approximately $300,000 for the evening's entertainment saw one of the most amazing endings of modern fistic battles as Loughran, rendered helpless by a vicious left hook to the body and right that crashed full on his chin, took a count of five, rose to his feet and stood dazed in a neutral corner as Referee Lou Magnolia counted him out.

Ease and Insolence Mark Victory.

Seldom in all his varied career of success and disappointment has Sharkey appeared to better advantage. From the opening gong Loughran, a slight favorite, was well nigh helpless before the vicious gob's power and confidence.

Even in the short span of their appearance, Sailor John outboxed the former master of light-heavyweights, outspeeded him with sharp left jabs and handled ambitious Tommy with ease and insolence in the clinches.

With startling suddenness, the fast, careful milling of the first two rounds turned into a slaughter in the third. The echoes of the gong still were echoing in the huge ball yard when Sharkey, as though finally loosed from a leash drove across the ring, rammed his left to Loughran's body

FIGHT BY ROUNDS

FIRST ROUND—Carefully, with the deepest respect for each other, the big clean limbed fellows sparred in the center of the ring. Sharkey growled, buried his head and smashed into Tommy's body with both hands. Loughran grunted a bit and locked up the Boston gob carefully. Tommy bounced over a left hook to the chin but Sharkey reached him a long left hook as he drove forward again and bounced is right full on Tommy's chin to the surprise of all. Sharkey made the fancy Loughran miss with his neat left jab and they bounced together to swap at close quarters. This time Tommy had things under control and he tied up Sharkey as the bell rang.

SECOND ROUND—Sharkey's wild lunge went amiss as Tommy speared the sailor's head with a left and pushed him into the ropes. A bit peeved at such treatment Sharkey dove in with a long right that missed by two feet and Loughran neatly hooked his left to the chin. They fenced in the center trying to make each other lead until Tommy grimly accepted the challenge and rattled off Sharkey's scowling face. Sharkey drove the dancing master to the ropes with a left hook to the body, bounced his right full on Loughran's chin and banged home two lefts to the head.

Hundreds at Huggins' Bier; Services to Be Held Today

Final Tribute Paid Manager of Yankees; Mates on Team to Be Pallbearers; Body to Be Taken to Cincinnati.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon for Miller Huggins, the biggest little man in baseball, and immediately after the last prayers are said, the body of the Yankees' manager will start "back home" to Cincinnati. Huggins was born in the Ohio city and won his first measure of major league baseball fame there.

The body of the great baseball leader was taken this afternoon to the Church of the Transfiguration, better known as the "Little Church Around the Corner," East Twenty-ninth street, where several hundred persons were waiting. One by one they filed through the mortuary chapel to pay a final tribute. The chapel was open to the public until 9 o'clock tonight and will remain open until the funeral services at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Players and Coaches To be Pall Bearers.

Acting as pallbearers at the services tomorrow will be members of the Yankees who, with Huggins at the helm, twice won three straight American League championships.

The two coaches who planned with him, Arthur Fletcher and Charles O'Leary, and four active players, Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Tony Lazzeri and Earle Combs will be the pallbearers. The baseball game scheduled for tomorrow between the Yankees and Nats at Washington was postponed to permit the players to pay their last tribute.

Soon after the services, New York's last tribute will be paid to the man who brought six world's championship pennants to the Yankee Stadium and his body will start west to rest beside his parents in the city of his birth. Services will be held at the First Presbyterian Church, Cincinnati, Sunday afternoon

Officials to Accompany Body to Cincinnati.

In addition to members of the immediate family, the body will be accompanied to Cincinnati by Charles McManus, representing the Yankee Club; Bob Connery, Huggins' associate in the ownership of the St. Paul Club of the American Association, and a committee from the New York Chapter of the Base Ball Writers Association of America, consisting of William Slocum, Ford Frick, Marshall Hunt and Charles Segar.

SOUL OF HONOR SCORES IN HAVRE DE GRACE UPSET

Filly Defeats Choices in Feature

Dinah Did Upset and Battleship Grey Bow in Duel.

Latter, Odds-On, Sets Pace Until Final Yards in Stretch.

Special to The Washington Post.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 26 Soul of Honor, the chestnut 3-year-old in the Audley Farm Stables, ran one of the smashing good races he displays at times when he was returned a winner in the Defender purse, Havre de Grace's feature race, this afternoon. There were only five starters in the Defender, which was run as the fourth race, and Soul of Honor was the outsider in the betting. George Fields had the mount, and he rode one of his waiting races.

In the early stages Fields was content to permit Battleship Gray and Dinah Did Upset to go to the front and set a rapid pace. He trailed along three or four lengths off the leaders, and it was not until well around the far turn that he made an effort. When he did, Soul of Honor responded in a manner that made it evident that he would be a dangerous factor when the final test came.

Battleship Gray, who was out in front skimming along at a fast clip for the first 7 furlongs, began to weaken and Dinah Did Upset, who was in behind him, charged on the gray horse inside the furlong pole.

Outsider Pays $230; Last to Leave Post

Lincoln Fields Race Track, Ill., Sept. 26 (A.P.).—The toughest break for the talent at the meeting came in the running of the fourth number, when Paul Revere, racing under the colors of J. Reelan, and paying $230.34 for $2 to win, $90.04 for a place and $27.98 to show, led his field home by four lengths after being last to leave the barrier. Champ de Mars, the favorite in the wagering, finished sixth.

For a time it looked as if she would be the winner, but Soul of Honor, not to be denied, was answering Fields' call in game fashion. He simply would not give up, and in the last 50 yards was up on almost even terms with the first two.

In the final strides Soul of Honor got his head in front and was winner by that margin over Dinah Did Upset. Battleship Gray was third, another neck away. Then came Glen Wild, who tired in the stretch run. The fractional time was 0:24, 0:47 2-5, 1:12 3-5 and the mile in 1:38 2-5, the winner finishing out the mile and 70 yards in 1:45 4-5.

Fair Beth Scores in Driving Finish.

The conditions of the fifth race were framed for horses foaled in Maryland and it brought together a field of six. J. E. Griffith furnished the winner in Fair Beth, who beat the Bedwell entry, Fair Thorn, out a length in a driving finish. Rockdale threatened to make a runaway affair of the race. He opened up a lead of two lengths in the run around the first turn and led until rounding the far turn, where he began to tire. Fair Thorn then went to the front, but in the final furlong tired badly.

Ebuford, who refused to break and was left at the post, ran a smashing good race. He was a distant trailer the first half mile, 25 lengths out of it, then he began to pick up his field, and at the finish was fourth, beaten only seven lengths. Ebuford is notorious for not breaking, and in a dozen starts at different times has refused to leave the post.

The colors of the Washington sportsman, Samuel Ross, were carried to victory in the opening event when his cod looking Dunlin filly, Norma Jean, scored in runaway fashion. Field lost no time in sending her to front. When the break came Norma Jean got off in runaway fashion. In the stretch run Norma Jean stalled off a challenge from Calome and at the end was doing her best to outlast the rapidly closing Merry Mack. The latter, sluggish at the barrier, broke slowly and was last but one of her field in the run down the backstretch. In the final furlong she responded gamely to her rider's call and at the finish was gradually wearing the leader down. In the final drive Sir Tuscan outgamed Calome to beat her out a nose for third money. Sunview, a first time starter, showed early speed and when he weakened his rider eased him up.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUDDHA, $8.30, $6.00, $4.10; RHYME AND REASON, $40.20 19.50; ESTELLE MARIE, $3.70.

BUDDHA, outrun first half mile, moved up rounding the far turn on outside of his field and closed with a rush. RHYME AND REASON forced the pace until rounding the far turn, where he moved up and shook off ESTELLE MARIE. He hung on well until the last hundred yards. ESTELLE MARIE broke fast and showed a lot of early speed. ASTER was eased up when he tired.

COLLYER'S COMMENT on the SPORT of KINGS

BY BERT L. COLLYER

IT'S all off. Fellows, here's where we break off the eighteen-day diet—off with the grape fruit and on with the pineapples. None other than RED BRIAR from the Bedwell stable and which is finer than split silk, goes in the opening dash, rain or shine, down at Havre de Grace and for your further information, the country is loaded. Now if you are not solid ivory from the shoulders up you will have the old two meggs riding smack bang on the beezer. THUNDER LARK and SCARED O' NOTHING for what is left.

LISA, which was beaten a whisker in the gadabout, is taken to bring home the grapes in the fourth. This is a pretty fair sort of hide. FRIAR CLIFF was whispered about overnight and it is just possible he may have a bit of help. Whonose?

Old CAPTAIN APPLEJACK, which showed a real keen effort last time, is slated to be dragged from the vat in the sixth. Mighty bad bunch but JACK is worth a flier.

Speaking of fliers, brings to mind that Wee Miller Henderson is going to shoot with the AUDLEY ENTRY in the second. Let your conscience be your guide.

Over at Lincoln Fields, the big noise is CRAFTON. Taking a line through that last effort, when T. S. Jordan came to life, with a rattle, the Westerner was the runner-up at all stages, though beaten by four or five lengths at the end. Personally I look for the contention to come from WATER LAD, especially if the going turns soft. This one has been in the brine for quite a spell.

Work Featured Early Drive of Macks to League Flag.

By BRIAN BELL
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Robert Moses Grove, whose sinewy left arm may carry the fate of the Athletics in the world's series, is the most taciturn White Elephant of the herd as well as its leading pitcher. Grove, say his fellow players, can remain silent in several languages, on and off the baseball field.

However, the southpaw of the tall, thin pitcher speaks an eloquent language. For three seasons in succession he has won 20 or more ball games for Connie Mack. For three months of 1929 he seemed well on the way to 30.

When the A's had played 77 ball games, the half-way mark, Grove had won 18 games and lost 2. In the second half of the season his momentum was considerably slowed, his record today of 20 victories and 5 defeats representing a dull performance in comparison to the earlier brilliant achievement.

Grove Sold to Macks By Baltimore.

Grove's contract was sold by Baltimore to the Athletics at the close of the 1924 season when he had completed five brilliant years with the Orioles. Transfer of the right to use Grove's left cost Connie Mack and his associates $100,000.

The lanky left-hander did not declare dividends in his first two years as a White Elephant, but he made up for lost time later. For three years there has been little dispute to his friends' claim that he is "the best of the cockeyes," as ball players call left-handed pitchers.

For a time Grove was a flaming flash of destruction for four or five innings and only fair thereafter. The ball players said he had no intermediate speed and had to go "on high" or not at all. He pitched himself out and could not go the nine innings. It is different now. No longer does he go up like a rocket and come down like a stick.

Southpaw Has Changed His Style.

Grove rings up his quota of strikeouts, leading the league by a comfortable margin, but he does not try to throw every ball past the batsman. The change has made him a better pitcher.

"Grove studies the batters now and pitches to their weaknesses, instead of just relying on his stuff," said Connie Mack.

An American Leaguer, who has seen Lefty's sizzling fast ones shoot by for third strikes, and has connected for solid smacks from his delivery, sized him up:

"When Grove has a good day, nobody can beat him. When he has a bad day, he can't beat anybody.

Charlottesville Sports Group Aids Add Warren

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 26.—At a meeting tonight of members of the Charlottesville Athletic Club, which scheduled the Lamar-Warren match on September 20, a statement was made by an officer of the club as to the financial status of the organization.

It was shown that the outstanding expenses had been paid, leaving a balance of approximately $100. As the club is a beneficiary organization, the amount on hand was dispensed, by a resolution of the club, to help repay Add Warren for an accident incurred on his trip to Charlottesville.

It will be recalled that the match did not come off because of a last-minute misunderstanding.

GRIDMEN TO MEET.

Brookland A. C. football players will meet tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock at 1247 Girard street northeast. New line and back field candidates are asked to attend. All present members are asked to be on hand. Practice will be held Sunday at 2 o'clock on Brookland Field. Monk Schneider, of last year's team, is asked to report.

while the home gang had blown golden opportunities in the second and fourth and had broken the ice in the fifth when Goslin's triple followed Rice's double. Two hits and a walk filled the bases in round 2, but Wells fanned Hadley, while two walks and a hit packed the aisles in round 4 with none out only to see Wells, passed up by the Nats on two occasions, strike out Ruel, Hayes and Hadley in rapid order.

New York knoted the count in its sixth, showing its first signs of hitting. Lary's double and Ruth's single scored a run right at the start. Gehrig forced Ruth at second, but tried to score on Durst's double a moment later and was nipped at the plate on Cronin's great relay of West's return peg.

Yankees Score Five Runs in 7th.

Then came the seventh, with Campbell's poor guess and the Yankees' 5 runs, and it was all over but the shouting, although the Nationals had the satisfaction of pounding Wells off the rubber in the eighth after Cronin and West, first two up, had doubled and Spencer had drawn a pass. Wilcy Moore, however, was able to stop the onslaught quickly.

Lloyd Brown granted an unearned run in the eighth and Garland Braxton was hit hard in the ninth, but what happened in these two frames was merely incidental.

Sammy West had a field day and gave the ladies' day crowd its only cause for cheer. True, he lost Ruth's blow in the sun in the ninth and let it go as a triple, but he also robbed the "King of Klout" of a hit of the same length in the fourth by the best catch seen here in many seasons. Playing over toward the flag pole, he raced into the wall of the stands in left-center to drag down the ball at arm's length overhead, smack against the concrete. Ruth could not believe the drive had been caught until twice told to leave third, where he had stopped, by Umpire Nallin.

West made one other good catch, started a double play, had two assists, and cracked out a double and two singles to lead the Nats at bat. Cronin, with a two-bagger and a single, was the only other home player to hit safely more than once. Catcher Dickey was high gun for the Yankees, getting a triple and two singles. Neither Ruth nor Gehrig could get any homers, but each came close with blows good for three sacks, while the Babe also singled home a run.

Erana and Silva Even In Vet. Bureau Play

Mariano A. Erana deadlocked the issue in the finals of the Veterans' Bureau net tourney on the Monument courts, when, after losing the first set to F. M. Silva at 6—4, won the second at 11—9. The match was called off on account of darkness. It will be continued this morning at 7 o'clock on the same courts.

In the semifinals Erana defeated Weiss, 6—4, 3—6, 6—4, and Silva disposed of Harper, 4—6, 6—2, 6—3.

A loving cup and a racquet donated by the Veterans' Bureau Welfare Association will go to the winner and runner-up, respectively. Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of the bureau, will make the presentation at the bureau at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon.

LOUGHRAN STOPPED QUICKLY BY SHARKEY

and before Tom could raise his guard, smashed home a winging right to the chin. The blow caught the surprised Philadelphian a glancing crack on the chin and he toppled backward to the floor, his head resting across the lower rope in his own corner, his face lifted to the ringlights.

Sharkey Waved Back By Referee.

Tommy didn't seem to be greatly hurt for he looked about him, climbed to his feet at the count of five as 45,000 of the faithful rose with him in one mighty roar. Almost sedately, the white skinned youngster, his face composed and eyes open, walked along the ropes to a neutral corner, one hand raised to his cheek.

There, while the audience looked on amazed, the referee jumped about excitedly, and Sharkey hopped gleefully across the ring. Loughran turned his back to his foe and gazed serenely out into the audience, oblivious of his surroundings. Sharkey, like a mad animal released, almost climbed Tommy's back when Magnolia released him and waved Loughran back to his corner.

For several minutes, Tommy sat in his chair, a half smile about his lips, as his handlers threw water upon him and sought to bring him back to consciousness. Finally he woke up, wrapped a towel about his face, and left the ring, beaten for the first time in four years and knocked out for the first time in his career.

Sharkey in Command From Start.

Almost from the opening gong, it appeared that Sharkey would prove the master of the recent graduate from the 175-pound ranks. Sharkey moved surely, swiftly, apparently contemptuous of the boxing prowess of the lighter man.

Right at the start, Sharkey carried the fight to Tommy, who despite his 186½ pounds, appeared almost small before the bull-like rushes of the 196-pound sailor. Every decisive blow in the first two sessions was struck by Sharkey and in each of these sessions he hurt Tommy with heavy left hooks to the body and an occasional right to the chin.

For a few moments in the first round, Loughran speared Sharkey's face with left jabs, dodged swiftly as Sailor John charged forward, and pushed him about on the ropes. There were few decisive punches, however, and little evidence of the bizarre ending.

Sharkey's triumph, the first of importance he has scored since blasting Jimmy Maloney from the front ranks to earn a bout with Jack Dempsey in 1927, tossed him right back in the van of contenders for the heavyweight throne Gene Tunney left vacant. It gave Sharkey one of the nominations for the second battle on the Miami sands, when the title probably will be awarded next winter.

As they came away Tommy was boxing studiously at the bell.

THIRD ROUND—Sharkey fenced and then flogged Loughran. Only a few seconds after the gong sounded Sharkey lifted a right hand to Tommy's chin that dropped him in his own corner, is head over the ropes. Tommy came up at the count of 5 but walked dazed to a neutral corner, turned his back on Sharkey and hung there helplessly. The referee held Sharkey and awarded him the fight on a technical knockout.

4 VETERANS IN VIRGINIA BACKFIELD

Sloan, Lewy, Kaminer and Faulconer Start Against R. & M.

Special to The Washington Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Sept. 26. The same four Virginia backfield men who were in the starting line-up of the last game of the 1928 football season against North Carolina will probably open the 1929 season for the Cavaliers this Saturday against Randolph-Macon.

The line, however, will be greatly changed. It is this forward wall that is causing trouble for Earl Abel, varsity head coach, and there is no telling just which of his charges he will throw into action against the Yellow Jackets.

Capt. Johnny Sloan at quarter back, Hunter Faulconer and Gus Kaminer at the half back positions and Albert Lewy as full back will more than likely compose the Cavalier back field. Coach Abel has used these men together as a unit so long that the combination is not expected to be changed before Saturday.

In the line, George Taylor, center, Hunter Motley, tackle, and Dick Turner, end, will probably be back in their old places, but Coach Abel is by no means sure just who he will use in the other line positions.

Larry Whalen, the big tackle, who was out all last year with a bad sprain, seems likely to be paired with Motley. But the two guard positions are wide open and there is a fight on to see who will win the right to play the vacant flank.

In the second scrimmage of the season, the coaches received further enlightenment as to how their attack may operate on Saturday. The routine of plays is still limited, for Coach Abel insists that his men learn each one thoroughly before going on to the next.

After Randolph-Macon comes a game that the Virginians want to win very much. They go to play South Carolina's crack in Columbia on October 5. For two years the Gamecocks have bested the Cavaliers. This year Coach Laval is reported to be developing a speedier and a trickier attack than he had last fall. The Carolinians have never defeated Virginia on Melton Field.

St. Stephen's Gridmen Open Against Lyons

St. Stephen's Athletic Club Eleven will open its season Sunday when they face the strong Clarendon Lyons on the latter's field. The Saints have gathered together a great array of 150-pound stars and expect to cut quite a figure in the title chase.

Joe Bush, former Apache and Mohawk star, will coach and play in the back field. Santo Zumbo and Don Wallace, stars of last year's eleven, are back. Games can be arranged by calling Jimmy McLarkey at North 9811.

W. & M. TEAM PRIMES FOR OPENER

Hard Test Expected Against St. John's Tomorrow.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., Sept. 26. William and Mary's gridmen have been working hard this week under Coach Bocock in preparation for the season's opening game with St. John's College, of Annapolis here at Williamsburg this Saturday night.

The coaches have been driving the Indians at a hard pace, as they were not at all satisfied with the results of last week's practice game with a nearby Army post team.

This Saturday evening's fracas, while opening the Indians' schedule, also starts William and Mary's third year of playing under the giant arc lights. William and Mary holds the distinction of being the first Southern college to play night football, having inaugurated the system in 1927 in a game with Catholic University of Washington.

Game is Regarded As Toss-up.

From all indications this Saturday's contest should be a real battle. William & Mary will be laboring under the handicap of an inexperienced line, while St. John's will be flashing that fight that is characteristic of the underdog. St. John's, however, is the underdog in name only, as critics here call the game a toss-up.

The Indians' starting line-up will probably be Mozeleski and B. Bauserman, ends; Murphy and Benton, tackles; Darden and Douglas, guards; Fields, center; Ryan, quarter; Maxey and Baldacci, halves, and Capt. Bauserman, full back.

Red Sox to Engage Hyattsville on Sunday

The Hyattsville All-Stars have been strengthened by the return of several former stars who have been playing in minor leagues for Sunday's game with the Washington Red Sox at Riverdale Park at 3 o'clock.

Mike Gordon, Frank Chase and Vic Keen are expected to aid the Hyattsville team. The Sox and the All-Stars have been rivals for several seasons and Sunday's contest is likely to produce some heated battling.

Commerce Golf Finals Between Brownell-Rice

M. L. Brownell and C. A. Rice are the finalists in the Interstate Commerce Commission annual golf tournament which was featured yesterday in the semifinal and quarter-final rounds by three extra-hole matches.

Brownell reached the semifinals by defeating John P. Money 1 up in 20 holes, and gained the finals by eliminating M. V. Trowbridge by the same score. Trowbridge previously defeated W. A. Roberts, 2 and 1. Rice survived the semifinals by beating R. R. Shay, 1 up in a 22-hole match, after Shay had eliminated C Sivenius, 8 and 7, in the quarter finals. Rice won his quarter-finals match from P. R. Baker, 1 up.

The finals will be held today at Indian Spring.

Light Denison Eleven Opens Against Navy

Special to The Washington Post.

Granville, Sept. 26.—When Denison University meets the United States Naval Academy Saturday at Annapolis, its first Eastern major gridiron appearance, it will present a line-up averaging only about 170 pounds per man. Coach Edson Rupp, of the Ohio institution, is planning to make a favorable showing by means of a fast running and deceptive passing attack.

Practice this week consisted of special drill on these offensive tactics, and defensive scrimmage with the heaviest freshman squad in Denison history, which has been using Navy formations against the varsity with considerable success.

A squad of 25 men, exclusive of coaches and trainers, left Newark, Ohio, Thursday night for Washington, where a practice session will be held, the following afternoon, with a Denison alumni banquet for the team in the evening.

The game will be the opener for both teams.

Birmingham Defeats Dallas Again, 7 to 6

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 26 (A.P.). Birmingham scored a 7-to-6 victory over Dallas to win their second straight game of the Dixie series here today. The game was loosely played and five Steer pitchers were used in withstanding the Baron batting attack.

The Barons scored single tallies in each of the first four innings and three in the fifth. A Steer batting rampage in the second was good for four runs.

Ray Caldwell relieved Hasty in the fourth after two runs had been tallied. Ray permitted a brace of runs to cross the plate, after which he held the Steers fairly well in check.

Frazier, starting for Dallas, gave way to Tauscher in the third, who was relieved by Barnabe in the fourth. George Connally, who hooked up with Dick Ludolph in a brilliant pitching duel yesterday, came to the mound in the fifth and served two innings before being replaced by Joe Martina in the eighth.

Three Steer errors were costly, while the Barons failed to make good all their chances to score, on two occasions runners being on the bases with but a pair of runs being scored off three hits.

HESTON, D. C. NET PRO, IN SEMIFINAL

Faces Richards Today; Kozeluh Extended by Youth.

By TED VOSBURGH
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Paul Heston, private professional, of Washington, today entered the semifinal round of the national pro tennis singles championship and tomorrow will meet Vincent Richards, the defending champion. In a well-played quarter-final match Heston defeated John Cardegna, of the Ardsley Tennis Club, Ardsley, N. Y., 6—3, 6—4, 6—2.

Great as he is, the famous little Czechoslovakian shot maker, Karel Kozeluh, had his troubles today at the hands of a comparatively obscure young American, Charles M. Wood, of the Fairview Country Club, Elmsford, N. Y.

Kozeluh won by scores of 6—0, 6—2, 7—5, reaching the semifinal round, but the match was harder fought than the figures indicate and before it was over the probing racquet of the sandy-haired American had found a weak spot in the shining armor of "Karel the Great."

Wood Evens Games In Final Set.

Using the favorite weapons of Vincent Richards, the volley and smash, Wood came up from 2—5 in the final set to even matters at 5—all. For the first time in the tournament Kozeluh was faced with possible loss of a set.

But this was a real grudge match, the Czechoslovakian having taken seriously a boasting remark once made by Wood, and Kozeluh proceeded to fight his way into the saddle, take the next two games and win.

About 300 persons witnessed the day's play. In the semifinals tomorrow Kozeluh encounters the former amateur star, Howard Kinsey, of San Francisco; and Vinney Richards, the defending champion, meets Paul Heston.

Heston Defeated In Doubles.

Richards and Kinsey, already in the penultimate round in singles, confined their efforts to doubles. Richards, paired with Kozeluh won from Heston and Wood at 6—2, 6—2, 6—1 and Kinsey, playing with Wallace Johnson, of Philadelphia, qualified to meet the Richards-Kozeluh alliance in the final for the championship tomorrow by mowing down Henry A. Geidel, Glencove, N. Y., and J. Basil Maguire, South Orange, N. J., 6—0, 6—2, 6—2. Then accounting for Allen Behr, New York, and Phil Bagsby, Kansas City, 6—3, 6—1, 8—6.

SINGLES. QUARTER-FINAL ROUND—Paul Heston, Washington, D. C., defeated John Cardegna, Ardsley Tennis Club, Ardsley, N. Y., 6—3, 6—4, 6—2; Karel Kozeluh, Czechoslovakia, defeated Charles M. Wood, Fairview Country Club, Elmsford, N. Y., 6—0, 6—2, 7—5.

DOUBLES. QUARTER-FINAL ROUND—Howard O. Kinsey, California Tennis Club, San Francisco, and Wallace F. Johnson, University of Pennsylvania coach, defeated Henry A. Geidel, Nassau Country Club, Glencove, N. Y., and J. Basil Maguire, Orange Lawn Tennis Club, South Orange, N. J., 6—0, 6—2, 6—2.

DOUBLES. SEMIFINAL ROUND—Howard O. Kinsey, San Francisco, and Wallace Johnson, Philadelphia, defeated Allen Behr, New York, and Phil H. Bagby, Kansas City, 6—3, 6—1, 8—6; Vincent Richards, New York, and Karel Kozeluh, Czechoslovakia, defeated Charles M. Wood, Elmsford, N. Y., and Paul H. Heston, Washington, D. C., 6—2, 6—2, 6—1.

DeBeves and Harris Box at Silver Spring

Arthur DeBeves, European lightweight, has been booked to meet Billie Harris, of Fort Myer, in one of the feature bouts of the program being arranged by Lieut. Caddington for the Silver Spring Service Co., to be staged in the Silver Spring Armory next Wednesday night. DeBeves recently enlisted in the service company.

Harris has an enviable record in this section. He has met and defeated Mickey Flahive and Bob Garcia, Navy and Army fighters, respectively.

Cumberland Amateur Boxers Seek U. S. Title

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 26.—Amateur boxers of this section who will take part in the series of shows of the Knights of Columbus Home this season under the auspices of the Caseys will have a chance to show what they can do in national competition next spring. With the first Casey show on Thursday, October 3, the boys will be scored on a percentage basis and the boxers with the highest marks at the end of the season will be sent to the South Atlantic championships in Baltimore next spring. Successful in this they would continue to the elimination tournament for the East. Coming through the South Atlantic meet in Baltimore would advance to the Boston meet which runs right up to the national championship.

War Blue Polo Team Eliminates 3d Cavalry

War Blues eliminated Third Cavalry from the War Department's low-goal polo tourney yesterday when they gained an easy triumph, 11 to 2. One of the Cavalry goals was a handicap gift.

Capt. Shafer of the Blues was the high goal scorer with 6 markers, while Maj. Chaffe was next with 3. Lieut. Holbrook scored the only Cavalry goal in the fifth chukker.

The Blues brought the game on even terms in the opening period when Maj. Chaffee smashed one through from a scramble and continued to batter away at the Fort Myer uprights in every period to the final, scoring one or more in each.

Pitt Meets Disaster On 16th Hole.

The sixteenth hole was fatal to Pitt. He popped his mashie tee shot into the air and the ball fell in a ditch just below the tee. When he played over the green and instead of scoring a birdie 2, as happened in the morning round, he took 5 to hole out. Stevinson, in a right-hand trap from the tee, was on the green with his second and secured a 4, giving him a three-stroke lead. When both halved the seventeenth and eighteenth in par 4s the laurel wreath was again on Stevinson's brow. The cards:

ALEXANDRIA SPORTS

Special to The Washington Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Sept. 26.—The George Mason High School Football Team has scheduled nine games so far for the 1929 season, with one open date, according to Athletic Director Wilson. In addition, Wilson expects to arrange a game for tomorrow with some Washington team to open his season.

The schedule as arranged is as follows: October 4, Episcopal High; 11, Woodward School; 18, Warrenton High; 25, Washington-Lee High; November 1, Alexandria High; 8, open; 11, Fredericksburg High, and 22, Culpeper High, at Culpeper. All games, with the exception of the last named, will be played on the home grounds.

Prex Wilson, former William and Mary College star, now director of athletics at George Mason, has a squad of 25 candidates for his team, only five of whom were members of last year's team. The team, it is understood, will average 150 pounds.

Lecky Scott, quarter back, will captain the team, and the other four veterans are Martin Petersilia, end; Will Brown, half back; Claude Nixon, full back, and Mahoney, half back. Others seeking berts are Voss, Routzhn, Hicks, Schaefer, Glascox, Hoguler, Foote, C. Brown, Robert McCauley, Harris, Goods, Bettis, Heflin, Dabney and several others.

The Masonites will present a snappy appearance on the gridiron. Snappy looking brown jackets with orange numerals have been supplied the team. Each afternoon the players are going through a number of drills in preparation for the opening in district competition. Elwood King is manager of the team.

GLENDON SIGNS AGAIN.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 26 (Special). Richard A. "Old Dick" Glendon, veteran rowing coach who has signed a contract to handle Naval Academy oarsmen for another season, arrived in Annapolis today and started preliminary preparations for fall practice on Severn River that will be held throughout October.

2 MARYLAND TEAMS ARE READY

Washington College to Be Met in Opener Tomorrow.

UNIVERSITY of Maryland will have two combinations all set for the opening game tomorrow with Washington College at College Park at 3 o'clock, but no matter which one it uses the poundage will be practically the same.

There will be one great difference, though, and that will be in experience. One eleven is an all-senior outfit, the other is strictly a sophomore combination. However, it may be that the more youthful team will start the inaugural battle for the Old Liners.

When the weights of the men were added up it was found that the total poundage of the so-called varsity of veterans was 1,877 pounds, just one more than that of the sophomore aggregation.

The line-ups of the two teams, with the weights of players are as follows:

SENIORS.

ELLA CINDERS—Making Contact — By Bill Conselman and Charlie Plumb

Yesterday Ella had an informal meeting with Don South, a theme song writer on the transcontinental plane that is taking her to Hollywood where she has a contract for talking pictures.
MISS CINDERS, I HOPE YOU WON'T THINK I'M FRESH FOR INTRODUCING MYSELF TO YOU—
OH, NOT AT ALL! I REALIZE YOU DON'T HAVE A CHANCE TO MEET MANY PEOPLE ON AN AIR LINER! IT'S SO DIFFICULT TO GET OUT AND GO PLACES!
PLEASE, MAY I SEE YOU AGAIN AFTER WE ARRIVE IN HOLLYWOOD? I WANT TO WRITE A SONG FOR YOU!
GIVE ME TIME TO THINK IT OVER, AND IF I CAN'T FORGET YOUR FACE I'LL FACE THE MUSIC!
YOU'VE GOT ME AS MUCH UP IN THE AIR AS AN ENDURANCE FLIER, BUT I'LL STICK IT OUT UNTIL I BREAK THE RECORD FOR CONTINUOUS ATTENTION TO ONE GIRL!
MAYBE I'LL REFOOL YOU!

BANK OF ENGLAND DISCOUNT RATE UP

Directors Raise It to 6½ as Move to Stem Flow of Gold Overseas.

RESERVE IS FAR DOWN

London, Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Finding that other means to stem the serious outflow of gold from the country was bringing about a situation that approached the danger point, the Bank of England today raised its discount rate from 5½ to 6½ per cent. This is the highest bank rate in eight years.

The government and the commercial community had been most reluctant to face a rise in the rate because of the adverse effect that it was expected to have on Great Britain's slowly improving business position. As late as September 7 Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer, had publicly expressed the hope that the increase would not become necessary.

But recent sensational withdrawals of gold for France and America left the bank directors with little or no option. Within fifteen weeks the bank has lost more than 30,000,000 pounds in gold and for the current year its gold reserve has been reduced by 42,000,000 pounds.

Meanwhile new gold from South Africa, which under normal circumstances would have come to England, has been diverted to other countries.

The last time that the bank rate was 6½ per cent was in April, 1921. It was reduced to 6 per cent in June of that year and was cut in July to 5½ per cent. It was generally believed that the present high rate would be similarly short lived.

In previous instances the bank has usually raised its rate whenever its gold reserve fell to 150,000,000 pounds, but in this case, yielding to the wishes of the government and the business community, the reserve was allowed to go down to 130,000,000 pounds before action was taken.

Word came from Dublin tonight that the Irish bank rate had been raised from 6 to 7 per cent. This was in line with increases in the Swedish, Norwegian and Danish rates, all of which followed the example of London.

NEWS OF LATEST HAPPENINGS IN MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

CHAMBER URGES USE OF VIRGINIA'S PORTS

Secretary Newman Stresses Their Advantages to Apple Growers.

HAMPTON ROADS LAUDED

Richmond, Va., Sept. 25 (A.P.).—After an exhaustive investigation of the export of Virginia apples through Hampton Roads, Clarence W. Newman, research assistant of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, has submitted to the chamber's committee on the development of Hampton Roads ten recommendations with respect to procedure in building up a larger export movement of Virginia apples through Old Dominion ports.

The recommendations of Newman, which were released today, follow his report of yesterday dealing with his analysis of trade in apples, one of a series of investigations he is carrying on concerning the import and export of certain commodities. Newman found that if the routing of apple shipments were determined upon the basis of freight rates alone, Virginia apples would be exported through Virginia ports instead of New York, which gets practically all this business. His investigation disclosed that notwithstanding a combination of circumstances favoring the Hampton Roads routing normally only one or two per cent, or even a smaller proportion, of the exports of Virginia apples are shipped from Hampton Roads.

In the light of his findings, Newman has offered the following recommendations:

Advantages Are Cited.

"The idea of obtaining a large or regular movement of apples for export from Winchester, and from the northern part of the Virginia apple-producing region generally, should be definitely abandoned.

"Efforts should be concentrated upon the development of Hampton Roads routing for exports originating in the central and southern parts of the apple region, notably in the Staunton-Crozet and Roanoke-Bedford sections.

"Everything possible should be done to encourage increased reports from those sections particularly favored for shipment through the Hampton Roads ports.

Export Trade Seen.

"Specific port development agency should be charged with the responsibility for keeping in direct touch with the apple export situation continuously, and especially during the export season.

"The list of exporters and overseas selling representatives should be carefully rechecked in order that all those concerned can be kept constantly informed of developments to their interest in connection with the possible exports of their products through Hampton Roads.

"A special schedule of direct sailing, including information with regard to refrigeration services, should be sent regularly during the season to all companies or individuals included in the list of exporters.

Shippers Should Meet.

"Occasional meetings should be arranged with shippers exporting from the territory particularly favored for Hampton Roads routing, in order that their problems may be discovered and given attention.

"Occasional conservative, factual, news releases regarding steamship services available for apple shipments through Hampton Roads and regarding the actual handling of apples through the ports should be dispatched to newspapers in the apple-shipping sections.

"The exporters should be brought to consider the desirability of taking increased interest in the mechanics of export handling and marketing with the idea that they may possibly find it to their advantage to alter their marketing methods.

Foreign Markets Sought.

"Measures should be undertaken to encourage the increased use of Virginia apples in overseas markets, particularly on the continent of Europe.

"It is believed that, by carrying out the program which has just been outlined, constructive results may be obtained in the direction of building up apple exports through Hampton Roads within the limits of existing facilities for the overseas movement.

"If the services available for handling such traffic as can be developed by this procedure prove satisfactory, they will continue to be used for this purpose. If the service prove unsatisfactory, no method could be used to perpetuate the movement.

"If, by means of the foregoing program, even as much as 10 per cent of the apple exports originating in Virginia could be moved through Hampton Roads, this would mean a movement of close to 10,000 tons annually, or about ten times the present normal movement. Satisfactory handling of this volume movement would create a distinct demand for the Hampton Roads routing, and this demand would lead, naturally, to the provision of such additional steamship services as can find useful employment."

The Rev. Dr. J. H. Brunk, Harrisonburg, Va., the conference superintendent, is assisting Bishop G. D. Batdorf, of Harrisburg, Pa., who is presiding, in conducting the business of the conference.

The Rev. W. H. Smith, pastor of Calvary Church, which is host to the conference, gave the address of welcome. Bishop Batdorf responded.

There are 147 ministerial and lay delegates registered. Various reports were heard during the morning. The conference includes sixty churches located in sections of Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

Committees Are Appointed.

The following standing committees were appointed:

DR. BROWN ATTACKS DEMOCRATIC PARTY

Short Ballot, Election and Other Laws Are Hit by Coalitionist Nominee.

TAMMANY RULE CLAIMED

Roanoke, Va., Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Dr. William Moseley Brown, coalition candidate for governor, declared here tonight that the Democratic "machine leaders in Virginia are still playing 'hand in glove' with the Tammany element," and that they have made a signal failure in many respects "despite their oft-repeated claims of having a corner on progressive ideas in our State."

The short ballot, fee tax system, election laws, seafood laws, conduct of the Shenandoah National Park project and general tax program were among the subjects ascribed to the present administration which drew sharp criticism from the dual nominee of the Republican and Anti-Smith parties in an 18,000-word speech.

"The Democratic leaders in Virginia insist upon their devotion to the dry causes," the speaker said. "They loudly proclaim their allegiance to the principles of prohibition. They insist that they are in favor neither of the repeal nor modification of the eighteenth amendment.

National Aid Alleged.

"They even announce that they will accept no aid from the Democratic national committee for conducting their campaign. But despite all these avowals of their sincerity of purpose, they continue to negotiate with the leaders of the anti-prohibition movement in the State and Nation. Their strongest ally is the chairman of the Democratic national committee, who accepted his job for the express purpose of using the national Democratic party as a means of 'getting rid of the damnable prohibition law.'"

Declaring that he was actuated only by the desire to serve his State and his people, the coalition standard bearer said that the members of the conventions which nominated him put principle above party, and the welfare of the State above mere party considerations.

An impartial appraisal, he said, of the political situation in Virginia "can but bring us to the conclusion that the Democratic machine leaders have but one motto, namely 'Political Expediency.' Hence those who vote for the Democratic nominee will be voting, 'not for Pollard and Progress' but rather for 'Pollard and political expediency.'"

Short Ballot Attacked.

In his onslaught on what he termed "machine rule" in the Old Dominion, Dr Brown aimed a quiver of arrows at the so-called short ballot, declaring it one of the most un-Democratic policies of the present administration, an administration which he said Dr. John Garland Pollard, Democratic gubernatorial nominee, stood squarely behind. In urging upon the people of Virginia the adoption of these amendments, he charged that "the machine leaders of the State have assumed a position which is directly contrary to all the principles of Jeffersonian democracy.

"Under the present Democratic administration," the speaker held, "more power has been concentrated in the hands of one man—the governor—than this official has ever possessed in the entire history of the Commonwealth. "It is an affront to the citizens of Virginia and an insult to their intelligence," he asserted, "for any one to imply that they are not sufficiently qualified to elect their State treasurer, their superintendent of public instruction and their commissioner of agriculture."

Dr. Brown said the people of the State have begun to awaken to "the fact that they have fallen into a trap deliberately set to catch them unawares. They are coming to see that they have unwittingly made it possible for the governor to control rather more than 30,000 out of 45,000 officeholders in the State."

FUND FOR NEW PARK DECLARED IN SIGHT

Shenandoah National Area Work Progressing, Says Col. Glenn Smith.

GOES TO DIRECT SURVEY

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 26.—The Shenandoah National Park is making "splendid progress," and sufficient funds are "in sight" to complete the purchase of the Blue Ridge Mountain area and turn it over to the Federal Government, Col. Glenn Smith, of Washington, secretary of the Southern Appalachian National Park Commission, declared here today.

Col. Smith was en route to the Blue Ridge Mountains to look after the Government Engineering Corps now making the final boundary line survey for the park.

"The park movement is not dozing," said Col. Smith, in response to a question; "a great amount of detail work, like the boundary line survey and preparations for buying the optioned land is now being worked out.

"Congress has appropriated $100,000 to make the survey of the boundary lines. We need $35,000 more to complete this survey, and this amount is included in the Federal budget to be presented to the next session of Congress.

"Land in the northern end of the park area is now being optioned, and the price asked by land owners is reasonable. There is every reason to believe that when the time comes to actually buy the land and turn it over to the Federal Government, enough money will be in sight from sources outside the State to take care of the financial side of the program to establish the park."

$140,000 Street Bonds To Be Asked for City

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., Sept. 26.—A bond issue for street improvements aggregating probably $140,000 will be asked in the next fiscal year, according to A. L. Fuller, chairman of the public works committee.

The committee is now preparing its annual budget and, according to Fuller, is convinced that the city can not continue to retire serial bonds and provide municipal improvements out of current revenue.

Worry Over Illness Leads Him to Suicide

Special to The Washington Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 26.—A coroner's jury this forenoon returned a verdict of suicide in the case of Michael Tudoran, 40, of Wheeling, who was found dead early this morning in a room of a Terra Alta hotel with a revolver wound in his head.

Worry over illness is believed the motive, as Tudoran was lately a patient at the State Tuberculosis Sanitarium there.

PORTS OF VIRGINIA SHOW TRADE GAINS

Larger Proportion of Latin Commerce Enters Roads Than Before War.

EXPORTS ALSO INCREASE

Richmond, Va., Sept. 26 (A.P.).—Substantial gains in trade have been made by Virginia ports during the last fifteen years, George J. Eder, chief of the Latin-American section, United States Department of Commerce, states in an analysis appearing in the current issue of Commerce Reports, official Department of Commerce publication dealing with foreign trade.

The result has been that a materially larger proportion of the Latin-American commerce of the United States now passes through Hampton Roads gateway than was true in the prewar period, Mr. Eder says. The relative gains made by Hampton Roads and by ports of the South Atlantic, the Gulf and Pacific Coast have been made at the expense of the North Atlantic ports, notably New York.

Mr. Eder notes that the commerce of the United States with Latin America has grown from $300,000,000 in 1900 to over $2,000,000,000 at the present time, and states as the object of his examination the determination of the share which the different parts of the United States have in this rapidly developing trade, with respect to which the United States has outstripped England, Germany and France combined.

New York Still Leads.

New York still dominates the trade with Latin America, but whereas the actual volume of New York's business with the countries to the south has increased, the relative share of the port in this trade has fallen off sharply, declining from 66 per cent in 1913-14 to 61 per cent in 1928 on the export side, and from 58 per cent to 48 per cent on the import side.

The drop in the share of the North Atlantic district in exports is attributed in large measure to gains on the Pacific coast and the Mexican border. The South Atlantic ports barely hold their own, while the Gulf ports suffered a slight relative setback.

The relative gains in the Hampton Roads trade with Latin America have been largely in the matter of imports.

"In imports," says the analysis, "the North Atlantic district show a decrease, although New York's losses are in part neutralized by gains in Massachusetts and Philadelphia. The South Atlantic district has gone ahead chiefly through advances in Maryland, Virginia and Georgia."

Mexican Imports Gain.

Imports of the South Atlantic ports from Mexico are more than ten times greater than before the war, though exports from these ports to Mexico have fallen to a low ebb, the figures show.

The share of the South Atlantic ports in the imports from Central America, has shown an increase, but as in the case with Mexico, exports have shown something of a relative decrease.

Referring to the commerce with the West Indies, Mr. Eder says: "The growing share of our West Indian trade taken by the Gulf and South Atlantic districts may be ascribed partly to their location with reference to that trade, and to improve steamship services."

It is in the trade with South America, however, that Hampton Roads has shown the most general improvement.

Exports Also on Rise.

Having spoken of the South American commerce of the Gulf ports, Mr. Eder continues: "The South Atlantic ports, too, show increased exports to South America, particularly to Brazil and Argentina. Maryland's exports to South America have risen from $357,000 in 1913-14, to $13,661,000 in 1928; Virginia's from $1,418,000 to $4,180,000, and Florida's from $1,580,000 to $4,003,000."

The doubling of United States imports from South America is largely due to the increased consumption of coffee in this country, and to the advance in the price of this commodity, it is pointed out. Attention is particularly directed to the opportunity which offers for the increased importation of coffee through the so-called outports, by reason of the "growing tendency to establish coffee-roasting plants at many consuming centers throughout the country."

Lack of Water Supply Lets Barn Burn Down

Special to The Washington Post.

Culpeper, Va., Sept. 26.—Fire of unknown origin early tonight almost totally destroyed a barn owned by George L. Hiden, Culpeper attorney, about 10 miles from this community. Loss was estimated at about $7,500.

The Culpeper fire department responded to the alarm, but lack of water at the farm prevented any possible assistance by the men in saving the large barn. A quantity of hay, live stock and farm implements were saved.

MURDER SUSPECT AGAIN SLIPS LAW

Negro, Wanted for Slaying of Alexandria Officer, Escapes at Gladstone.

HOUNDS LOSE HIS TRAIL

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
312 S. Washington St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

"Kid Lilly," alleged slayer of Police Sergt. Charles R. McClary, has for the second time been within the grasp of the police, only to wriggle away. The scene of his near-capture this time was Gladstone, 14 miles from Amherst, Nelson County, Va., where he seems to have been for some time, going under the name of John Gaines, which is an alias under which he is known to the local police.

Police Capt. W. W. Campbell, on Wednesday afternoon, received a telegram signed by J. A. Cappelle, special officer of Gladstone, reading as follows: "Advise quick if you want John Gaines charged with murder arrested and held." Capt. Campbell construed this to mean that Gaines, or Kid Lilly, was under arrest, and he immediately telegraphed Cappelle to "hold John Gaines by all means. Photo and finger prints to follow immediately. Wanted for murder." Shortly after sending this message, Capt. Campbell received one from Cappelle reading: "John Gaines gave us the run. We got within 200 yards of him with aid of bloodhounds. Think he can be run down."

He's Still Running.

So far as the local authorities have learned, Gaines, or Lilly, is still running, for it is understood that the blood hounds lost his trail and that he has not been captured. It is now understood that the Negro was merely under surveillance, the Nelson County authorities being uncertain, either of his identity or as to the fact of his being wanted here for murder.

The man, known variously as William Kidd, Kid Lilly and John Gaines, was placed under arrest here last June by Sergts. Edgar Sims and Charles R. McClary, on information from Tappahannock County to the effect that he was wanted there for felonious assault on a colored woman. Gaines was turned over to the Tappahannock sheriff, who started his prisoner to jail in a bus. On arriving at Chatham, Va., the Negro, who was handcuffed, jumped from a window of the bus and made his escape. About this time the local authorities learned that Lilly was wanted in Greensboro, N. C., for the murder of a policeman, and that a reward of $400 for his capture was offered.

On June 21, three days after the escape of Lilly from the sheriff, Sergts. Sims and McClary went to a house on North Patrick street to investigate a report of disorder. Sims approached the house from the rear and McClary from the front. As the latter neared the house, and was facing a narrow alley between it and the adjoining house, several shots were fired from the dark alley, one of the bullets taking effect in McClary's neck, killing him almost instantly.

Photos Identify Him.

The police investigation is claimed to have shown conclusively that the slayer was Kid Lilly, and circulars containing his photograph, finger-prints and description were immediately sent broadcast throughout the country. Nothing was heard of the fugitive until the latter part of August, when it was reported that he had been arrested by the police of Portsmouth, Ohio, on a charge of vagrancy, but released on his promise to leave the city, after which the police of that city found that they had let a murder suspect slip through their hands.

The Alexandria city council has offered a reward of $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of Lilly. Capt. Campbell has requested the Nelson County authorities to continue their search.

E. J. McDermott, deputy motor vehicle commissioner, had six truck drivers employed by L. M. Johnson and S. G. Park appear in police court yesterday morning to answer to a charge of having improper license tags on their trucks. Testimony was to the effect that the men were engaged in hauling in this city on contract work and operating with District of Columbia tags.

Attorney F. G. Duvall appeared for the owners of the trucks and Commonwealth Attorney Albert V. Bryan for the State, and after hearing the arguments of both, Police Justice W. S. Snow fined each $10 and costs. An appeal to the corporation court was noted.

It was stated that the drivers in question had recently been engaged in hauling from the building erected for Montgomery Ward Co. and later by the contractor engaged in excavating for the S. S. Kresge Co.

Principal Henry T. Moncure, of the Alexandria High School, announced yesterday that the cadet corps has now reached 95 students, and as the minimum strength necessary for the troop to get aid from the Federal Government in the shape of guns, ammunition, and other equipment, is 100, it is hoped that goal will be reached by October 1 in order to secure the needed air and instructor.

Principal Moncure said that many parents of students are under the misapprehension that the high school cadet corps would be subject to military service in the event of war, and since that idea has been dispelled there has been an increas in recruiting.

Fitzgerald Council No. 459, Knights of Columbus, elected officers at a meeting held on Wednesday night, as follows: William A. DeVaughan, grand knight; H. L. Wheatley, deputy grand knight; Francis H. Fannon, chancellor; Richard L. Carne, recorder; Thomas J. McFarland, treasurer; M. E. Greene, advocate; W. J. Greenan, financial secretary; the Rev. W. A. McKeefry, chaplain; John E. Breener, warden; T. J. O'Reilly, inside guard; Clarence Coombs, outside guard; John A. Nugent, trustee for three years, and George W. Kimball, trustee for two years.

Property owners in the 300 block of King street, between Royal and Fairfax streets, have petitioned City Council to improve that block similar to the improvement being made in the other blocks in that street.

The Employees Educational meeting of the Virginia Public Service Company will be held tonight at 8 o'clock at the George Mason Hotel, with Charles M. Jones, chairman. RUM RAID CHARGES QUASHED BY JUDGE

Smell Declared Insufficient Basis for Dry Agents' Entering Garage.

THREE MEN DISMISSED

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 26.—Judge William C. Coleman, in the United States District Court today, granted the petition to suppress the evidence and quash the indictment in the case of Thomas Miller, jr., of Silver Spring, Md., and Arthur Suit and William D. Tapp, both of Washington, charged with manufacture and possession of liquor. The raid which led to their arrest was made solely on a sense of smell, it was charged.

After criticizing the conduct of Miller on the witness stand, Judge Coleman, in granting the motion, said: "It seems to me that the agents exceeded their authority. If that be true, on the general question of their entrance and seizures, it becomes unnecessary for me to go into details of what they did. The whole proceeding seems to me to have been in excess of their authority, and, that being borne out by the weight of the evidence, I will grant the motion."

It was testified that on the night of December 8, 1927, a group of prohibition agents broke down the door of Miller's apartment, which was over a garage on a large estate in Washington, arrested the three defendants and seized a still, along with a large quantity of alleged whisky mash. The raid was made without a warrant and solely on an odor which emanated from the second floor of the building, where Miller's apartment was located.

The motion was filed on behalf of the defendants by Albert D. Esher, a Washington attorney.

He saw the latter, James Cutlip, 32, also a miner, sit down at a table in an adjoining room as a trusty from the county jail. His temper flared and he emptied the gun at Cutlip, who fell dead.

Lubich said Cutlip some two years ago inflicted injuries that sent him to the county poorhouse, a hopeless cripple, with his right side paralyzed.

SMOKING PARSON STIRS CLERGYMEN

West Virginian's Refusal to Give Up Tobacco May Be Bar to Deaconate.

DEFENSE IS APPLAUDED

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 26—The Baltimore annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, at its second day's meeting here today, dealt largely with consideration of the eligibility of various candidates on trial and those who are to be received in full conference membership, about sixteen in number.

These items are to be finished tomorrow previous to election of delegates to the general conference at Dallas, Tex.

The status of the Rev. W. H. Craver, pastor at Augusta, W. Va., who has been on trial two years, following the report of the committee that he be not passed to the deaconate because of breaking his promise not to use tobacco, brought animated discussion. Rev. W. J. Whitsell, of Ronceverte, W. Va., chairman, said the committee had pleaded vainly with the young man to abstrain from tobacco, only to be told that he would in public but would not when in his room or study.

Applause Snuffed Out.

The Rev. G. G. Martin, Roanoke, Va., in defense of the young man, pointed out that many leading members of the conference used tobacco. He said he thought it ill-advised to condemn a promising young minister for the same practice. His words brought applause, whereupon Bishop Collins Denny, who is presiding, said it was bad form to make a demonstration when "amens" would have sufficed to express the feeling.

A motion to give Mr. Craver opportunity to appear before the conference and explain his position was laid on the table on motion of the Rev. Dr. F. J. Prettyman, of Baltimore, and the matter again referred to the committee on admissions, which is to give Mr. Craver another interview and then report.

In explanation of the rule against tobacco it was stated by one of the leading members of the conference that it was imposed about sixteen years ago by the general conference.

It requires that ministerial candidates make a promise that they will not use tobacco and that if they had been users, they would desist. This does not apply, however, to the old members and was legislation for the future. It was said in the case of Mr. Craver that he had made a promise and the question was whether he was to obey it. Many of the older members of the conference, including Bishop Denny himself, may be seen enjoying their cigars during relaxing moments at their hotels.

Married Only Recently.

Mr. Craver, who is a Baltimorean, his mother residing in that city, was married in Cumberland several weeks ago.

The rules of the conference call for four years of study on the part of candidates. The first two years they are on trial or probation. If they pass the examination at the end of two years they become deacons and are received in full connection, but they must continue their studies two years longer when they are ordained as elders.

The Rev. John Knox, stationed at Bethesda, Md., was granted a location at his own request. This means he is no longer subject to appointment by the bishop. This superannuate relation was granted James B. Hedrick, Front Royal, Va., and J. C. Hooks, Newmarket, Va.

Would Alter Boundaries.

The conference had before it in committee a communication from the Western Virginia conference concerning the relocation of conference boundary lines.

Among the speakers who addressed the conference today were J. C. Crawford, Nashville, Tenn., secretary of the Board of Lay Activities; Dr. E. H. Rawlings, Nashville, Tenn., secretary of the General Board of Missions, and Dr. T. B. Ellis, Louisville, Ky., general secretary of the Board of Church Extensions, who told of progress all along the line in church building. The Rev. Harry Evaul, pastor of the Center Street Methodist Episcopal Church, this city, as fraternal delegate from the Baltimore conference, extended greeting formally to the conference today.

Saturday morning at 10 o'clock was set for the report by the committee on memoirs. Members of the conference who died during the year were Fiske E. Hammond, Roanoke, Va.; Louis L. Lloyd, Kerrs Creek, Va., William E. Miller, Mount Airy, Md., William H. Sanders, Jessups, Md.; Henry I. Stephens, Standardsville, Va.; and H. Monroe Strickler, Luray, Va.

Membership Gains.

The Rev. H. Sydenstricker, presiding elder of Rockingham District, reported a net increase of 208 members in his district during the year. A new church was erected at Craigsville, Va., and the churches at New Hope and Mount Sidney were rebuilt. The Rev. Harry V. Wheeler, presiding elder of Moorefield District, reported that there were 500 new members received by confession of faith.

Tonight the anniversary of the Sunday school board was observed. Former Judge M. L. Walton, Woodstock, Va., presided. The speakers were the Rev. R. K. Nevitt, Washington Sunday school field secretary; Dr. E. B. Chappell, Sunday school editor and the Rev. Dr. Charles D. Bulla, of Nashville.

Presbytery Votes For Church Union

Winchester Group Adopts Report Favoring Closer Link With South.

Piedmont, W. Va., Sept. 26.—The Winchester Presbytery adjourned here today to meet next April 15 at Charles Town, W. Va., after adopting a report approving the basis of union between the Southern and United Presbyterian Church and recommending that the proposition be sent back to ad interim committees for settlement of details of administration and property rights of the two denominations.

When the meeting opened Tuesday evening, Judge G. K. Kusp, of Romney, W. Va., was elected moderator, succeeding the Rev. H. W. Shannon, of Front Royal, Va.

Action was deferred on the ministers' annuity fund until the next meeting of Presbytery.

Among the speakers were Dr. James E. Allen, of Elkins, president of Davis and Elkins College, and Dr. C. D. Fulton, Nashville, Tenn., executive field secretary of foreign missions of the Presbyterian Church of the United States.
